Acknowledgments

Mead & Hunt, Inc. (Mead & Hunt) would like to thank the following individuals and state and local organizations for assisting us with this study: Carol Carey and Becca Hine with Historic Saint Paul; Amy Spong and Christine Boulware with City of Saint Paul Planning and Economic Development, Heritage Preservation; Mollie Spillman and Eliza Rosenberg with Ramsey County Historical Society; Erin Coryell with Historic Saint Paul Board of Directors; John Manning and Steve Trimble with Saint Paul Heritage Preservation Commission; the GIS Department of the City of Saint Paul; and the staff of the Minnesota Historical Society, State Historic Preservation Office (SHPO). Additionally, Mead & Hunt would like to thank Jane McClure, Jean Marault, Tom Schroeder, Garneth Peterson, Bob Roscoe, Steve Beautow, Don Empson, and other residents of the survey areas who have provided information on their neighborhoods. Finally, we would also like to thank Tait A. Danielson Castillo with the Frogtown Neighborhood Association, Leslie McMurray with the Payne Phalen District 5 Planning Council, and Betty Moran with the West 7th/Fort Road Federation for their assistance with public involvement meetings.

The Saint Paul survey project is a partnership of Historic Saint Paul, the Saint Paul Heritage Preservation Commission, and the Ramsey County Historical Society. It is made possible with funding provided by the State of Minnesota through the Minnesota Historical Society, from the Arts and Cultural Heritage Fund, and the City of Saint Paul.

Executive Summary

In 2011 Historic Saint Paul, in partnership with the City of Saint Paul Heritage Preservation Commission and Ramsey County Historical Society, contracted with Mead & Hunt, Inc. (Mead & Hunt) to conduct a reconnaissance survey of historic resources in portions of the neighborhoods of Payne-Phalen, Thomas-Dale, and West 7th Street. Maps of the survey areas are included in Appendices A1, B1, and C1, respectively. A Steering Committee of representatives from Historic Saint Paul, the City of Saint Paul, and the Ramsey County Historical Society was established to oversee the project.

The objectives of the reconnaissance survey were to:

- Identify and document intact historic-age properties in the survey area that meet the City of Saint Paul criteria for Heritage Preservation Sites or the criteria for listing in the National Register of Historic Places (National Register)
- Identify themes, places, and areas that require further study
- Identify additional historical and cultural resource observations in the survey areas that may be of value to the Steering Committee members in fulfillment of their respective missions

Inventoried properties must retain sufficient historic integrity in order to convey a sense of time and place. One test to measure if a property retains historic integrity is to ask if the original owner or builder would say the property looks very similar to how it existed during their lifetime. Alterations to historic properties such as replacement windows, artificial siding, or non-historic additions diminish a structure's historic integrity. Buildings that have several alterations do not retain historic integrity and were not documented in the reconnaissance survey. Inventoried properties retain historic integrity and compare favorably with similar historic-age resources in the city. It is important to note that inventoried properties are not categorically recommended for designation as a Saint Paul Heritage Preservation Site or for listing in the National Register. Properties recommended for further study are important examples of historical and/or architectural trends, compare favorably with similar examples, and appear to meet Saint Paul Heritage Preservation Site criteria and/or National Register designation criteria.

The goal of the inventory is to identify and document properties that are important to the development of Saint Paul or that are associated with important state and/or national historic contexts. The results of these efforts are included in the Saint Paul Historic Resources Inventory Database, maintained by the City of Saint Paul Planning and Economic Development Department. This inventory builds upon the following context studies, which were prepared by Landscape Research in 2001, and historic resources inventories:

- Pioneer Houses: 1854-1880
- Transportation Corridors: 1857-1950
- Residential Real Estate Development: 1880-1950
- Churches, Synagogues, and Religious Buildings: 1849-1950

- Neighborhood Commercial Centers: 1874-1960
- Downtown St. Paul, 1849-1975
- Historic Sites Survey of Saint Paul and Ramsey County, completed by Patricia Murphy and Susan Granger in 1983
- History/Architecture Inventory at the State Historic Preservation Office (SHPO) of the Minnesota Historical Society

The survey areas contain nine Heritage Preservation Sites and/or designated National Register properties. Within the entire survey area, Mead & Hunt documented 167 individual properties during fieldwork that appeared to meet at least one criterion for Saint Paul Heritage Preservation Site and/or National Register designation.

Based on the results of the reconnaissance survey and preliminary historic research, 167 individual properties and five areas appear to be associated with significant historic contexts and retain good integrity. As such, these properties are recommended for intensive-level research. Inventoried properties are associated with the following themes:

	Business and Industry	8
	Civic	2
	Culture, Fine, and Applied Arts	0

	Residential Development	58
	Transportation	0

Further research and survey work, including a detailed historic context of themes associated with these properties, is needed to determine if they qualify for Saint Paul Heritage Preservation Site and/or National Register designation.

An additional goal of this project is to provide observations regarding historical and cultural resources that do not rise to the level of significance for local or National Register designation but are important to the overall neighborhood fabric. Neighborhood fabric includes groups and collections of historic-age properties that may not rise to the level of significance that leads to designation, but which remain important as contexts for significant properties and as building blocks for neighborhood revitalization. These observations may be useful to partnering organizations in fulfillment of their respective missions. Each of the survey areas represent pieces of Saint Paul's earliest history and such observations, large and small, may include specific structures and groups of structures that possess historic and/or aesthetic interest, but may also extend to notes on the visual character of the neighborhood areas, character-defining features, and historic neighborhood fabric and setting. Where feasible, current observations were compared and contrasted with observations from the 1983 Historic Sites Survey. Such comparisons, almost three decades apart, begin to suggest important considerations in assessing the trends or arcs of neighborhood development, thereby leading to remedies and allocations of resources where appropriate.

Products of the survey include individual inventory files for documented properties that include inventory forms, photos, and historic research materials collected during the survey, as well as an electronic database of the inventory, mapping of individual properties, and this report. These products are available at the offices of all three partnering organizations and at SHPO.

1. Historic Resources Inventory Process

Professionally qualified historians with Mead & Hunt conducted the reconnaissance survey in accordance with the Secretary of the Interior's Standards for Archaeology and Historic Preservation and the Guidelines for SHPO Architecture/History Projects. Following these guidelines, Mead & Hunt prepared a preliminary research design in February 2011. This chapter provides an update to this research design and summarizes the process and objectives of the reconnaissance survey.

A. Survey areas and objectives

(1) Survey area

Using the findings from the 1983 Historic Resources Survey, recommendations from the City of Saint Paul's Comprehensive Plan, and areas identified in the Invest Saint Paul initiative, the Steering Committee defined the survey areas as portions of the Payne-Phalen, Thomas-Dale, and West 7th Street neighborhoods.¹ See Map 1 on page 11 for a city-wide map that delineates the three survey areas.

Properties already designated as Saint Paul Heritage Preservation Sites and/or listed in the National Register have previously been evaluated under local and/or National Register Criteria and were not reevaluated during this survey effort. An updated inventory form was completed for each property. See Sections 2.B.(1), 3.B.(1), and 4.B.(1) for a list of these properties. An example of the Saint Paul Heritage Preservation Commission – Building Inventory Form is included in Appendix A.

Previous historic resources studies that have been completed in the survey areas include:

- Granger, Susan and Patricia Murphy. Historic Sites Survey of St. Paul and Ramsey County, 1980-1983: Final Report. Saint Paul, Minn.: Ramsey County Historical Society and the Saint Paul Heritage Preservation Commission, 1983.
- Sazavich, James, Scott McGinnis, and Donald Empson. Uppertown Survey Final Report. Prepared for the Saint Paul Heritage Preservation Commission and the Minnesota Historical Society, 1992.
- Zellie, Carole and Peterson, Garneth O. "Historic Payne Avenue Business District." Prepared for the East Side Neighborhood Development Company, 1999.

(2) Objectives

The objective of the reconnaissance survey is to identify and document intact historic-age resources that qualify as a Saint Paul Heritage Preservation Site or for National Register designation, and identify themes that require further study. This survey builds upon ongoing efforts by the Saint Paul Heritage

Inventory Process

Preservation Commission (HPC) to update and expand the existing Saint Paul Heritage Preservation Sites listing.

Part of these ongoing efforts include work by the HPC to complete periodic inventories that identify and document properties that are important to the development of Saint Paul or that are associated with important state and/or national historic contexts. The results of these efforts are included in the Saint Paul Historic Resources Inventory, which is maintained by the City.

In 1983 the HPC and Ramsey County Historical Society conducted a comprehensive, citywide reconnaissance survey. This effort focused on buildings deemed to have architectural value with considerations for the social, cultural, archaeological, engineering, economic, ethnic, or political history of Saint Paul. Inventory forms were completed and a list of properties that required further research was compiled.

The HPC has developed broad thematic historic contexts as outlined in the City of Saint Paul Comprehensive Plan, Historic Preservation Chapter (2010). These contexts include:

- Pioneer Houses: 1854-1880
- Transportation Corridors: 1857-1950
- Residential Real Estate Development: 1880-1950
- Churches, Synagogues, and Religious Buildings: 1849-1950
- Neighborhood Commercial Centers: 1874-1960
- Downtown Saint Paul: 1849-1975

Based on a recommendation associated with Strategy 3: Identify, Evaluate, and Designate Historic Resources included in the City of Saint Paul's Comprehensive Plan, Historic Preservation chapter, an additional historic context entitled Neighborhoods at the Edge of the Walking City has been developed in conjunction with the current survey efforts.

During the reconnaissance survey, Mead & Hunt documented historic resources, defined as those properties that are at least 30 years in age; believed to have historical, cultural, architectural, or engineering significance, and meet at least one of the criteria for Heritage Preservation Site or National Register listing; and retain sufficient integrity to convey their significance. Documented properties were then evaluated based on available research and their historic integrity in order to determine their ability to qualify for Saint Paul Heritage Preservation Site designation criteria or National Register Criteria for Evaluation, which are summarized in Sections 1.B and 1.C.

Table 1 itemizes the number of properties documented with an inventory form during the reconnaissance survey. Documented properties included those listed in the National Register; designated as a Heritage Preservation Site; properties surveyed in the 1983 Historic Sites Survey, identified as being eligible or having major significance, and were resurveyed in the current survey; properties surveyed in the 1983 Historic Sites Survey, but did not have a significance recommendation and were resurveyed in the current survey as historic resources (defined as properties believed to meet at least one criteria for designation as a Heritage Preservation Site and/or for National Register listing); and newly surveyed properties recommended as historic resources.

B. Summary discussion of the City of Saint Paul Heritage Preservation Site Criteria

Per the Designation of Heritage Preservation Sites (Chapter 73, Section 73.05 of the city ordinance), to be eligible for designation by the City of Saint Paul as a Heritage Preservation Site, a property must be considered significant under one or more of the following criteria:

- (1) Its character, interest, or value as part of the development, heritage, or cultural characteristics of the City of Saint Paul, State of Minnesota, or the United States.
- (2) Its location as a site of a significant historic event.
- (3) Its identification with a person or persons who significantly contributed to the culture and development of the City of Saint Paul.
- (4) Its embodiment of distinguishing characteristics of an architectural or engineering type or specimen.
- (5) Its identification as the work of an architect, engineer, or master builder whose individual work has influenced the development of the City of Saint Paul.
- (6) Its embodiment of elements of architectural or engineering design, detail, materials, or craftsmanship that represent a significant architectural or engineering innovation.
- (7) Its unique location or singular physical characteristic representing an established and familiar visual feature of a neighborhood, community, or the City of Saint Paul.

C. Summary discussion of the National Register Criteria for Evaluation

To be eligible for listing in the National Register, a property must be considered significant under one or more of the National Register Criteria for Evaluation, which include:

- A: Association with events or activities that have made a significant contribution to the broad patterns of history.
- B: Association with the lives of persons significant in our past.
- C: Association with the distinctive characteristics of a type, period, or method of construction, or represents the work of a master, possesses high artistic values, or represents a significant and distinguishable entity whose components may lack individual distinction.
- D: Holds the potential to provide important information about prehistory or history.

Generally, to meet eligibility requirements for National Register designation, properties must also retain sufficient historic integrity to convey their association with one of the criteria and be at least 50 years in age or possess exceptional significance. For more information, see How to Apply the National Register Criteria for Evaluation.²

D. Survey methodology and design

In consultation with the Steering Committee, Mead & Hunt developed a survey methodology and implemented the methodology to complete a reconnaissance survey of the designated areas. The process included the following steps, some of which were conducted concurrently with others:

- Review of background documents and materials
- Coordination with the Steering Committee to identify individual properties requiring resurvey
- Participation in three public meetings with neighborhood residents
- Interviews with local historians and other informants
- Completion of inference mapping process
- Development of reconnaissance survey strategy
- Preparation of maps, forms, databases, and other survey materials
- Implementation of reconnaissance survey strategy in survey areas
- Consolidation of documentation generated by survey

(1) Review of background documents and materials

Mead & Hunt gathered and reviewed neighborhood development historic contexts, historic maps, and information on previously documented properties in the survey areas. This review was conducted to understand the historic development patterns, property types, and historic functions of properties dating from the mid-to-late nineteenth century to the early 1980s.

In addition to the historic contexts, important secondary sources related to the neighborhoods were consulted to identify properties with possible historical significance. See Sections 2.D, 3.D, and 4.D for the sources used to inform the survey.

(2) Public involvement

The historic resources inventory process included public meetings designed to inform neighborhood residents of the project. The meetings were also opportunities to solicit information from residents on historic properties and important themes in the survey areas. The meetings were held on the following dates:

- April 28, 2011, Arlington Hills Lutheran Church, Payne-Phalen neighborhood
- May 2, 2011, West Minnehaha Recreational Center, Thomas-Dale neighborhood
- May 4, 2011, Mississippi Market Co-op, West 7th Street neighborhood

As part of the public involvement process, residents were also able to upload information and photographs about locally significant historic resources and important themes in the survey areas to Historic Saint Paul's website. Additionally, input from residents and local historians with specific knowledge of local history was elicited, and in several cases interviews were conducted to help inform the historic resources inventory.

(3) Inference mapping

The use of inference mapping to develop a strategy for a reconnaissance survey is an innovative technique developed in collaboration with the Steering Committee. As the name suggests, the technique involves the use of digitized city and county property data to create a series of maps from which the survey team can make inferences about the physical history and development of the survey areas. In general, the ultimate purpose of the inference mapping approach is to manage a very large number of properties with a limited amount of survey time and budget. The survey team used the inference approach to "infer" areas with greater and lesser potential to yield historic properties, particularly historic districts, and prioritize areas for a focused utilization of professional resources. Although the amount of available city and county data is vast, the data used for inference mapping was primarily the following:

- Dates of construction for individual property parcels
- Types of properties on each parcel (e.g. residential, commercial, industrial, civic)

The Mead & Hunt survey team examined the maps separately and in combination to identify concentrations of similar property types built in the same decade and, simultaneously, to identify survey areas with mixed construction dates. Although not mapped, the linear locations of historic transit routes were reviewed to understand the historic development patterns in the survey areas. The goal of identifying neighboring properties with similar years of construction was to identify properties, primarily residential, with a common architectural style. This common style would be the starting point for locating groups of properties that might be further examined for significance as a historic district based on architecture (or National Register Criterion C). Once identified, the area could be further reviewed for evidence of design integrity. The team also looked for concentrations of commercial properties that appeared to be associated with historic transportation corridors.

(4) Reconnaissance survey

The pre-survey process outlined above, including the inference mapping and survey strategy, resulted in a set of maps identifying the individual properties and groups of properties to be reviewed during the reconnaissance survey.

Qualified historians and architectural historians from Mead & Hunt drove accessible public streets and alleys within each of the survey areas to reassess previously documented properties and to identify additional historic-age properties that appeared to possess significance and retained sufficient historic integrity to convey an association with an identified historic context. Additionally, two particular categories of resources were documented during the reconnaissance survey unless the resource exhibited enough integrity loss that it was no longer recognizable from the period: resources known to have been constructed in the pre-Civil War era (prior to 1865), and extant resources that may have elevated significance because they are last vestiges in an area that has experienced substantial demolition over time. The team also reviewed the groups of properties identified in the pre-survey process to determine if each group met the requirements to be a potential historic district. If the pre-identified properties appeared to comprise a district, the team drove surrounding streets to determine the extent of a potential district. Potential district boundaries were based on concentrations of resources with similar architectural and neighborhood characteristics that generally retained integrity. If the areas appeared to be a potential historic district and its outside edges could be determined, a more precise set of boundaries was established by an evaluation of the integrity of the houses. Potential historic districts were documented with representative photography, and general information about the area and integrity of the properties was gathered.

In general, the project team set forth standards for loss of integrity resulting in impacts to character-defining features, including: additions not in keeping with the original style, changes in roofline, use of inappropriate materials, removal or cover of character-defining features, alterations to windows or doors, enclosure of historically open porches, changes to land use or setbacks, or significant alterations to the site. A high standard for integrity is imposed upon individually significant properties. A more flexible standard for integrity was applied to collections of housing forms making up a district and properties that were identified as having historical associations, associations with important people, or representing an unusual property type. Properties that displayed numerous or substantial physical changes have diminished historic integrity and appeared not to meet Saint Paul Heritage Preservation Site or National Register designation. As such, these properties were not documented.

Mead & Hunt documented and completed Saint Paul Historic Resources Inventory Forms for properties previously identified in HPC site files and the SHPO History/Architecture Inventory files, as well as newly identified properties using the Saint Paul Historic Resources Inventory Database. Mead & Hunt also indicated if the property was previously surveyed by SHPO or the HPC and provided its status and eligibility recommendation in the final report. Digital photographs were taken to document properties in compliance with National Park Service digital photography standards (March 2008) and were also added to the database.

Individual properties were documented as representative examples of popular architectural styles and for their association with residential development patterns that were significant in the development of Saint Paul. Intact residential properties that appear to represent early vernacular dwellings, early patterns of residential development, or that may possess local historical significance were documented if they met survey criteria, generally, despite some minor loss of historic integrity.

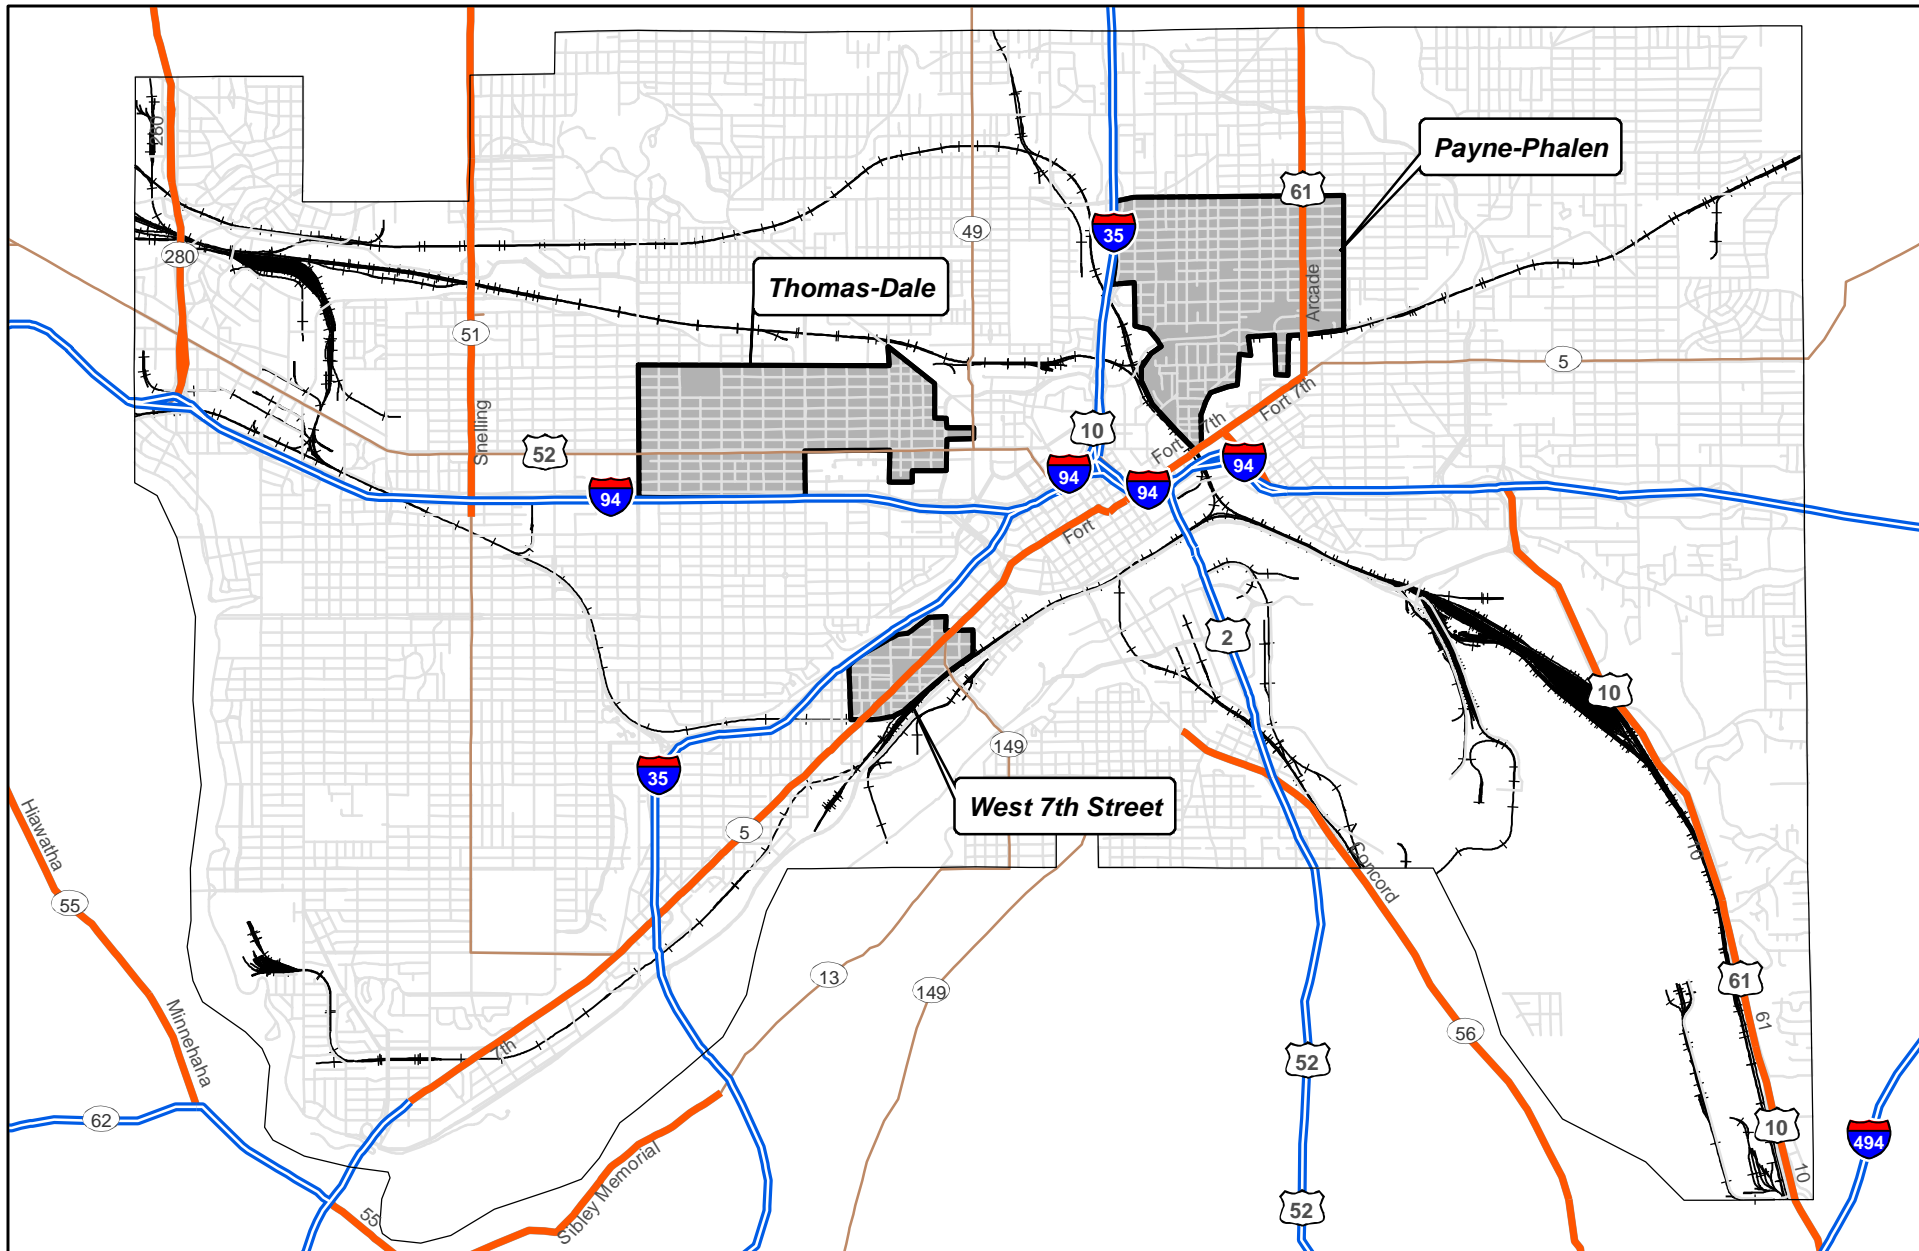

Property clusters identified as potential historic districts or as representing a historic theme may require further study to understand their significance. Preliminary boundaries were delineated for potential historic districts to guide future survey and research efforts. Recommended boundaries of properties and districts that terminate at or near the edge of the formal survey area do not necessarily reflect any consideration of the significance of properties immediately outside the survey area. For example, it is possible that an evaluation of properties outside the survey area could determine that they should be (or should not be) included in the boundary of a potential historic district recommended for further research. Properties within a potential historic district or related to a historic theme that are recommended for further survey and research were identified as contributing or noncontributing resources to the associated district or theme but were not individually evaluated.

Mead & Hunt documented and evaluated commercial, institutional, and industrial buildings individually and/or as contributing resources of a potential historic district if they appeared to meet the criteria for Saint Paul Heritage Preservation Site and/or National Register designation. Generally, changes to first-floor storefronts on commercial buildings and additions to industrial and institutional properties were found to be common. As such, an altered first-floor storefront or addition to these property types alone did not eliminate a building from meeting survey criteria.

(5) Post-survey activity

Following field survey, preliminary historic research was conducted on documented properties to identify individual properties or potential districts that appear to qualify for Saint Paul Heritage Preservation Site or National Register designation. Preliminary research included reviewing city building permits and historic maps. These efforts assisted in preparing recommendations for further survey and research to determine if they qualify for Saint Paul Heritage Preservation Site or National Register designation. This work also allowed Mead & Hunt to identify historic themes that require further study.

Mead & Hunt is providing preliminary evaluations of surveyed properties that are associated with identified historic contexts to determine if properties meet Saint Paul Heritage Preservation Site designation criteria or National Register criteria. Historical research and evaluation may reveal that not all the surveyed properties meet the necessary criteria for Saint Paul Heritage Preservation Site and/or National Register designation.

2. Payne-Phalen Survey Area

A. Historic themes

(1) Historic contexts and development of the Payne-Phalen survey area

Properties documented in the reconnaissance survey were associated with the following historic themes: Architecture; Business and Industry; Civic; Culture, Fine and Applied Arts; Education; Religion and Social Organizations; Residential Development; and Transportation.

In addition to these broad themes, the local contexts developed provide specific trends and themes important within the survey area. Together, these contexts serve as the basis for identifying and evaluating documented properties to determine if they qualify as a Saint Paul Heritage Preservation Site and/or for listing in the National Register. Properties may qualify based on their ability to retain the important physical features that convey their association with a historic theme and context and how well the property represents these features in comparison to similar properties.

A discussion of the City's historic contexts and previous inventories is included in Section 1. The development of an additional context entitled Neighborhoods at the Edge of the Walking City was part of this historic resources survey project. The primary purpose of a reconnaissance survey is to gather sufficient information on a geographical area to allow informed decisions to be made about potential historic properties in the area. In carrying out a reconnaissance survey, the resources in the survey area are characterized in relation to established historic contexts and then make recommendations for further research and survey work.

(2) Illustrated discussion of property types in the Payne-Phalen survey area

This section illustrates the primary property types documented in the survey of the Payne-Phalen area. A brief discussion of each topic is followed by representative examples of selected properties documented in the survey area. Photographs of these properties serve to illustrate the property types associated with the historic contexts and the history of the community. A complete tabular listing of documented properties is included on page 60. See Map 2 on page 52 for the location of the Payne-Phalen survey area within the City of Saint Paul and Map 3 on page 53 for a detail map of the Payne-Phalen survey area.

Residential

The residential theme relates to broad patterns of population growth and Saint Paul's expansion. Associated property types typically include single- and multi-unit dwellings connected with development patterns extending from major transportation routes and the natural growth of a community.

The earliest settlers in the Payne-Phalen neighborhood, located to the northeast of downtown, built log cabins along Phalen Creek and Trout Brook. By the 1840s and 1850s permanent settlement of the area began. Swedish immigrants built small, modest dwellings in the area known today as Swede Hollow. As the Swedish immigrants moved out of Swede Hollow, other immigrant groups including Irish, Italians,

Poles, and Mexican Americans moved in. Swede Hollow was condemned and redeveloped in the 1950s as a park.³

The oldest extant portion of the Payne-Phalen neighborhood centers around Payne Avenue, between Wells and Case Avenues. These wood frame worker's houses date to as early as 1870. However, the number of houses located in this area has been reduced due to redevelopment, alterations, and demolition. An early twentieth century modern apartment complex, located along Wells Avenue between Edgerton and Payne Avenue, is the latest multi-family residential development in the survey area.

The residential area to the west of Swede Hollow Park continues to maintain a unique sense of place. Houses in this area, defined geographically by Phalen Boulevard, East 7th Street, Payne Avenue, and the railroad corridor, date from the 1860s and are primarily front gable vernacular houses. However, more elaborate Revival and Victorian styles are present. Tightly crowded together on narrow streets, the houses in this area do not follow a set pattern in direction, size, or lot layout, giving the area a distinct feeling. In many cases, houses that were historically single-family dwellings have been subdivided into multi-family residences, and additions or other alterations have been made. Late twentieth and early twenty-first century development is interspersed throughout this area.

During the 1880s Scandinavian immigrants settled in the area north of Swede Hollow. The Burlington Northern Railroad, which ran along the eastern and southern boundary of the neighborhood, provided ample employment opportunities for this working-class neighborhood. In the 1890s the electric streetcar line extended into the Payne-Phalen neighborhood, spurring additional commercial and residential development.

Section 2 Payne-Phalen Survey Area

Development of the Payne-Phalen neighborhood radiated from along Payne Avenue northwest and northeast. The residential character of Payne-Phalen reflects the popular styles during the development of the neighborhood, including wood frame and brick front gable vernacular homes with Italianate and Queen Anne influences. The largest homes in the survey area are centered along Jessie and Bradley Streets in more high-style Victorian styles. The topography of this area is very hilly with the largest homes sited along the top of the hill.

An example of multi-family residential development at 904 Burr Street. This multi-family residence is in the Romanesque Revival style. View facing northeast.

Toward the northeastern portion of the survey area, later early twentieth century homes in the bungalow forms and Period Revival styles are found. Mid-twentieth century development has occurred in the northwestern portion of the survey area and includes Minimal Traditional, Ranch-style, and Split-level single- and multi-family homes.

Commercial and Industrial

The commercial and industrial theme encompasses the story of the production and trade of goods and services extending from the earliest settlement period to recent times. In order to better understand commercial and industrial development within the survey area, the previously developed contexts Neighborhood Commercial Centers: 1874-1960 and The Historic Payne Avenue Business District were consulted.

The east side of Saint Paul was separated from downtown due to natural topography and railroad lines. As a result, residents in the east developed their own commercial district along Payne Avenue, which was known as “the downtown of the East Side.”⁴ Later, the streetcar system encouraged commercial development along streetcar lines. Three north-south streetcar lines ran through the survey area: the Mississippi line, the Payne line, and the Forest-Phalen Park line. Of the historic commercial corridors within the Payne-Phalen neighborhood, Payne Avenue is the largest and most intact with late-nineteenth- and early twentieth century commercial buildings.

Payne Avenue was developed primarily by Swedish immigrants that moved out of Swede Hollow. In its initial development in the 1880s Payne Avenue was a mix of commercial and residential uses. However, as the commercial corridor further developed in the 1890s, large business blocks were built and the residential character of the street faded. Grocers, flour and feed stores, shoemakers, saloons, furniture stores, bakeries, jewelry stores, and other retail services were found along Payne Avenue.⁵

As the commercial district prospered around the turn of the century, in part due to the Payne streetcar line established in 1891, commercial buildings became larger and more ornate. The district featured brick one- and two-story buildings in the most popular architectural styles with larger multi-story buildings, such as the building at 991 Payne Avenue, anchoring some blocks. The commercial corridor retains its sense of place and good integrity between Aguirre Avenue and Lawson Avenue. Commercial buildings, such as 960 Payne Avenue and 858 Payne Avenue, speak to the early development of the district. To the north of Lawson Avenue alterations to early commercial buildings and more recently constructed infill development alters the commercial corridor's historic sense of place.

Other commercial corridors and nodes developed in the survey area along streetcar lines. The Mississippi line, established in 1890, ran from downtown Saint Paul along Mississippi Street, where it terminated at Edgerton Street. This line passed through industrial areas and railroad yards to the residential neighborhood located north of Maryland Avenue.⁶ While the line was popular for residential traffic, a small amount of commercial development occurred along Arkwright Street at Magnolia Avenue.

The Forest-Phalen Park line also spurred development in the survey area. Established in 1913, the line ran north from downtown along Arcade Street before turning east on Case Avenue. The line then continued north on Forest Street where it met the Payne line at the intersection of Maryland and Forest. The Forest-Phalen Park line was very popular since it ran to Lake Phalen.⁷ As a result, Arcade Street developed into another commercial corridor in the Payne-Phalen neighborhood. The Arcade Street commercial district has experienced a number of changes in the last century, including alteration of historic storefronts, demolition of buildings, and mid-twentieth century and more recent infill development.

Industrial businesses primarily associated with the Northern Pacific and Chicago, Saint Paul, Minneapolis and Omaha Railroads were also located on the east side of Saint Paul. The railroads established themselves on the east side in the 1870s along Phalen Creek and developed roundhouses and rail yards in the Payne-Phalen neighborhood. Other industrial businesses in the area included the Hamm's Brewery, Nelson Lumber Company, Excelsior Brewery, Drewry Brewery, Minnesota Mining & Manufacturing Company (3M), Northwest Wheel and Foundry, and Seeger Refrigerator Company, as well as a terra cotta plant, bedding company, and printing establishments.⁸ While these industries are not directly located within the Payne-Phalen survey area boundaries, they did encourage residential, and in turn, commercial growth.

Civic

Civic properties reflect the activities of government to develop public recreational facilities and public buildings or social institutions. Public recreational facilities include parks and their associated structures, and were developed for the purposes of providing amusement, sport, or diversion from work or domestic activities. Public buildings or social institutions include libraries, police stations, post offices, cemeteries, jails, armories, bridges, and city utility buildings.

The Payne-Phalen survey area features a number of civic properties, including parks, public buildings, and a library. Fire Engine Company #1, located at 676 Bedford Street, is an example of an early Saint Paul fire station. The station, constructed in 1900, served the Swede Hollow residential area. Though the building has had some alterations, it continues to serve as a repair shop for fire engines.

Wilder Park, located at 958 Jessie Street, is the largest park in the Payne-Phalen survey area. The park features a ball field, playground equipment, and a Work Progress Administration (WPA)-funded recreational building. The 1940 building has a stone facade and a new addition to the rear. The survey area also features a number of other parks that provide recreational amenities to the various residential developments in the area.

The recreational center in Wilder Park was designed in 1940 and constructed as part of a WPA-funded project. View facing west.

Lastly, Arlington Hills Branch Library, at 1105 Greenbrier Street, serves as the local neighborhood branch library. Designed by Charles Haulser in 1916, the library is a local Heritage Preservation Site and listed in the National Register.

Education

Education-related property types include public and private educational institutions, such as the public school system, universities, trade schools, and colleges. Two private schools and three public schools were identified in the survey area; however, due to large additions to the buildings, they no longer retain integrity and none were recommended for further study and evaluation.

Religious and Social Organizations

The theme of religion relates to the institutionalized belief in, and practice of, faith. Associated property types identified during the survey include churches, parish office buildings, and clergy residences.

The Payne-Phalen area has numerous churches with ties to the diverse ethnic groups that settled the area, including the Swedish, Italians, Germans, Poles, Russians, Jews, Mexican-Americans, and African-Americans. However, a number of the earliest ethnic churches in the Payne-Phalen survey area have been significantly altered, converted into residential or commercial businesses, or demolished. For example, the Second Swedish Methodist Episcopal Church at 701 Cook Avenue was replaced with a residential structure. The 1925 East Immanuel Lutheran Church located at 1173 Payne Avenue is one of the few churches in the survey area with minimal alterations. Of the early churches in the survey area, only the Church of St. Casimir at 937 East Jessamine Avenue, built in 1903, is a local Heritage Preservation Site and listed in the National Register.

The survey area included a number of churches constructed after World War II. The Catholic Church of Saint Patrick, located at 1095 Desoto Street, is an example of mid-twentieth century ecclesiastical architecture. The main sanctuary is elevated and a tall tower projects from the corner of a Romanesque Revival-inspired arched terrace. The church complex also includes a contemporary convent and parish house. The New Hope Baptist Church at 712 Burr Street is a Modern-style church located in the southern portion of the Payne-Phalen survey area. With its prominent concrete and stain glass tower, the church is distinctive in this part of the neighborhood.

The New Hope Baptist Church at 712 Burr Street is an example of modern ecclesiastical architecture in the Payne-Phalen survey area. View facing east.

Social organizations were identified in the Payne-Phalen survey area, primary along Payne Avenue. The Veterans of Foreign Wars (VFW), located at the southeast corner of Lawson and Payne Avenues, and the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers (IBEW), located at the northeast corner of Sims and Payne Avenues, are examples of mid-century buildings that were used primarily for social organizations to meet. The East Side Commercial Club constructed its headquarters at 991 Payne Avenue in 1907. This building is an excellent example of an early twentieth century social organization present in the survey area.

Transportation

The transportation theme includes a variety of modes of transportation and their effects on the development and expansion of the surveyed neighborhoods. Streetcar lines, railroads, and associated buildings such as railroad depots, repair shops, and bridges are common property types associated with transportation.

The railroad played an important part in the development of the Payne-Phalen neighborhood, offering employment opportunities to many of the immigrants residing in the neighborhood. However, no resources directly related to the railroad industry are extant within the survey area boundaries.

While commercial development occurred before the streetcar reached Payne-Phalen, the transportation network encouraged the growth and development of commercial businesses along the lines and brought new residential development. Resources relating to the streetcar system are not extant in the survey area, except for bridge abutments that carried the streetcar line on Burr Street over the Phalen Boulevard railroad tracks. The commercial nodes are also a lasting reminder of the importance of the streetcar to the Payne-Phalen area.

B. Reconnaissance survey results and recommendations for the Payne-Phalen survey area

The survey documented 61 individual properties, including 50 recommended as historic resources, according to the survey methodology. See Section 1 for a discussion of the survey methodology and the criteria for local designation and National Register eligibility. An inventory of the documented properties is provided in Table 11 on page 60. This list is organized by address and indicates the property's historic name (generally determined by the original owner listed on the city building permit), SHPO inventory number, and recommendation if the property requires further survey and research work. Inventory forms for properties are available at the Steering Committee member's offices and the SHPO. In addition to the information included in the tabular listing of documented properties on page 60, inventory forms include a description of the property and the primary historic context.

(1) Overview of previous survey efforts

Four properties in the survey area have already been recognized for their architectural and/or historical significance and are designated by the City as local Heritage Preservation Sites and/or listed in the National Register. Table 2 provides a summary of these properties, while Map 4 on page 54 shows their locations.

(2) Recommendations

Properties included in the inventory were documented and classified according to themes identified in this report. Table 3 provides a summary of these results.

(3) Individual historic resources and potential historic districts

The inventory includes 50 individual properties and three potential historic districts that are recommended as good candidates for intensive research and survey to determine if they qualify for designation by the City as a Heritage Preservation Site or for listing in the National Register. Intensive-level surveys follow and build upon the efforts of the reconnaissance-level survey by conducting thorough research to complete a detailed historic context and property-type analysis. The results of intensive-level surveys are subsequently used to further evaluate properties for Heritage Preservation Site and/or National Register eligibility.

Upon completion of the field survey, documented properties were assessed based on their related historical context, historic integrity, and comparison to similar properties within the survey area. Individual properties, as summarized in Table 4, and groups of related properties that appear to display outstanding architectural merit or have a known historical association are recommended for intensive-level survey and research. See Maps 3 on page 53 for the location of individual properties and potential historic districts recommended for further survey and research.

(b) Potential historic districts

Previous survey efforts identified two potential historic districts in the Payne-Phalen survey area: a concentration of workers housing to the east of Payne Avenue and the Payne Avenue commercial district. These areas were also identified through inference mapping as having similar characteristics warranting further field review. The previously identified workers' housing potential historic district was not recommended for intensive-level research due to loss of integrity. However, this area is recommended as a further study area in Section 2.B.(5). The previously identified Payne Avenue commercial district is recommended for further research as a potential historic district, as discussed in the following section.

The inventory includes three concentrations of properties that are recommended for further intensive research and survey to determine if they qualify for designation by the City as a Heritage Preservation Site and/or listing in the National Register as a historic district. Individual properties within the boundaries of these concentrations are identified in the inventory as contributing or noncontributing resources to the potential historic district.

The potential historic districts for which intensive-level research and survey are recommended are described below. The associated Saint Paul designation criteria and National Register criteria for which the potential historic district may qualify for designation are also provided.

Northwest Payne-Phalen Potential Residential Historic District

Saint Paul Designation Criteria: Criterion 1: History, Criterion 4: Architecture

National Register: Criterion A: History, Criterion C: Architecture

The following additions in the Payne-Phalen survey area feature homes predominantly from the late nineteenth to early twentieth century: J.M. Warner's Addition, Beaupre Kelly's Addition, Lanberg's Rearrangement, Arlington Heights Addition, and the Fairview Addition. Through inference mapping, this concentration of residential properties in the north-central portion of the survey area was identified for review based on similar dates of construction. During the reconnaissance survey, additional unifying characteristics, such as architectural styles and similar building sizes were identified. The houses are primarily front gable, one-and-one-half-story vernacular dwellings with larger two-and-one-half-story Queen Anne, Shingle, and Colonial Revival style homes interspersed throughout. Due to topography, houses are generally elevated above the streets. Setbacks throughout the additions are consistent with wide sidewalk medians and decorative replica period lighting at street corners and mid-block. Lot sizes vary with the largest lots located on Geranium Avenue and Jessie Street.

This potential historic district represents a relatively intact concentration of worker and middle-class housing from the late nineteenth and early twentieth century in this area of the city. Integrity is relatively good across the concentration of properties with replacement siding and windows the most common alteration. However, several homes have been identified as noncontributing resources due to substantial alterations and additions.

Due to the limits of this reconnaissance survey, tentative boundaries for the potential historic district were identified as Jessie Street between Maryland Avenue East and Cook Avenue East, Bradley Street between Jessamine Avenue East and Cook Avenue East, Jessamine Avenue between Bradley and Edgerton Avenue, and the west side of Edgerton Avenue between Rose Avenue East and Cook Avenue East, including the east side of Edgerton Avenue between Jessamine Avenue East and Magnolia Avenue East. See Map 5 on page 57 for preliminary boundaries and properties identified as contributing and noncontributing resources.

Northeast Payne-Phalen Potential Residential Historic District

Saint Paul Designation Criteria: Criterion 1: History, Criterion 4: Architecture

National Register: Criterion A: Community Planning and Development, Criterion C: Architecture

Consisting of the Oak Ville Park Addition, Evan's Addition, and Beaupre Kelly Additions, this potential historic residential district in the Payne-Phalen survey area is an intact collection of worker class housing. Through inference mapping this concentration of residential properties in the north-central portion of the survey area to the east of Payne Avenue was identified for review based on similar dates of construction. The survey area contains one-and-one-half-story front gable vernacular houses constructed in the late nineteenth and early twentieth century. Larger, two-story, front gable houses and smaller bungalows are interspersed throughout the potential historic district.

Integrity and condition of the houses is generally good, with minor alterations including replacement siding and windows, enclosed porches, and additions.

The topography of the area is generally consistent with houses elevated above street level. Setbacks and lot sizes are also consistent throughout. The neighborhood's Arlington Hills Lutheran Church and local Heritage Preservation Site, the Arlington Hills Branch Library, are located in the center of the proposed district.

Due to the limits of this reconnaissance survey, preliminary boundaries for the potential historic district were identified as located between Rose Street (at the alley) to the north, Magnolia Street (at the alley) to the south, Weide Street to the east, and Payne Avenue (excluding commercial properties fronting Payne) to the west. See Map 6 on page 58 for preliminary boundaries and properties identified as contributing and noncontributing resources.

Payne Avenue Potential Commercial Historic District

Saint Paul Designation Criteria: Criterion 1: History, Criterion 4: Architecture

National Register: Criterion A: Commerce, Criterion C: Architecture

In the study entitled the Historic Payne Avenue Business District, a potential commercial historic district was identified along Payne Avenue from the alley between Lawson and Jenks Avenues on the north to Aguirre Avenue on the south.⁹ The Mead & Hunt survey team reassessed the previous recommendation and does not recommend any changes to the potential historic district boundaries. See Map 7 on page 59 for proposed boundaries and properties identified as contributing and noncontributing resources.

(4) Thematic studies

Several types of resources identified in the Payne-Phalen survey are recommended for further research based on related themes. These themes may encompass a broader portion of Saint Paul outside of the survey area boundaries if research indicates. The types of resources are as follows:

- Brick single- and multi-family dwellings – Single- and multi-family dwellings constructed of brick are relatively uncommon throughout the Payne-Phalen survey area, as well as the other two survey areas. Additional research into the use of brick for residential construction, the source(s) of the brick, and use by particular builders may reveal significant historic associations.
- Concrete block single- and multi-family dwellings – Single- and multi-family dwellings constructed of concrete block are uncommon throughout the Payne-Phalen survey area, as well as the other two survey areas. Additional research into the use of concrete block for residential construction, the source(s) of the concrete block, and use by particular builders may reveal significant historic associations.
- Queen Anne pattern book houses – In the Payne-Phalen survey area, as well as in the Thomas-Dale survey area, a number of Queen Anne pattern book houses were identified as distinctive examples of an architectural style. A small collection was identified along Mount Ida Street, east of North Rivoli Street, during the 1983 historic resources survey. Others are interspersed throughout the southern part of the Payne-Phalen survey area. The two-story houses are characterized by Queen Anne detailing and unique two-story, corner, square bay windows. Further research into the use of this pattern in residential construction is recommended.

(5) Study areas

In addition to the individual properties recommended for intensive-level research and survey and the future survey and research topics, concentrations of properties within the survey area were identified as study areas. Individually or collectively, resources within the study areas do not rise to the level of architectural significance to be recommended as potential historic districts. However, if additional research revealed significant historical associations for a study area, intensive-level research and survey may be warranted. The study areas are described below.

- Workers Housing: In the 1983 historic resources survey, the area between Payne and Greenbrier Avenues from Jenks to Wells Street was identified as a potential historic district exemplifying an intact collection of workers housing in the Payne-Phalen survey area. However, due to integrity issues and loss of building stock, this area is recommended as a study area for further research into the developers/builders, early residents, and potential associations with a particular industry or company. The potential boundary of the study area has been reduced from the 1983 boundary to a core area along York and Sims Streets between Payne and Greenbrier Avenues. These streets exhibit the most intact and least altered workers housing in the 1983 proposed district. Houses tend to be one-and-one-half to two-story front gable vernacular homes. Many of the houses exhibit alterations, including extensive window replacement, siding replacement, alterations or removal of porches, modern additions, and mid-twentieth century infill development.

Two properties located within the study area, 679 Sims Avenue and 693 York Avenue, were surveyed and recommended for individual intensive-level survey and research.

- Railroad Island: During the public involvement component of the project, Railroad Island was identified as an area that may have important historic associations with the early patterns of settlement in the Payne-Phalen survey area. Railroad Island was named as such because it is a triangular section of the lower Payne-Phalen neighborhood that was bound on the north, east, and west sides by railroad lines (the east and west lines converged at a point to the south of this area, near present-day East 7th Street, to create the triangle). The railroad corridors continue to serve as boundaries on the north and west sides, and Payne Avenue generally serves as the eastern boundary.

Generally, Railroad Island has single- and multi-family dwellings that date from the mid-to-late nineteenth century. Commercial and industrial properties are located around the periphery. Churches and the school historically located in this area are no longer extant. Residences are typically one-and-one-half story, front gable vernacular houses, primarily frame. Dwellings constructed of brick or concrete block are interspersed throughout the area. Lot sizes vary from very narrow with little front and side yard setbacks to large lots. Located on the edges of the former Trout Brook and Phalen Creek valleys, Railroad Island has a hilly terrain, especially near the northwest corner. As a result, houses in the hilly areas are set above the street level and accessed by stairways.

In general, Railroad Island has experienced a loss of integrity. Most properties exhibit window replacements, siding replacements, and infilled porches. Additions to houses were also noted in some cases. The area has also experienced tear-downs resulting in numerous vacant lots and infill development, including multi-family housing complexes constructed in the mid-to-late twentieth century. Railroad Island is recommended as a study area and intensive-level research and survey may be warranted.

C. Observations about neighborhood fabric of the Payne-Phalen Survey Area

Although the primary goal of a historic resources inventory is to survey and evaluate properties in terms of local and National Register designation criteria, partnering organizations have individual missions that incorporate other areas of heritage preservation, including broader neighborhood development and revitalization. Historic Saint Paul's mission, for example, transcends specific buildings to include "working to preserve, protect, and enhance the historic character of Saint Paul's neighborhoods."

In particular, Historic Saint Paul participates in Invest Saint Paul (ISP), the Mayor's neighborhood reinvestment initiative that is "committed to promoting, supporting and helping people grow viable and sustainable communities."¹⁰ For Historic Saint Paul, involvement in ISP means working toward preservation beyond individual properties and historic districts and understanding longer-term growth and decline. This approach suggests a general understanding of “neighborhood fabric” in addition to specific designations of significant properties.

Neighborhood fabric includes groups and collections of historic-age properties that may not rise to the level of significance that leads to designation, but which remain important as contexts for significant properties and as building blocks for neighborhood revitalization. Loss of neighborhood fabric can lead to a downward spiral of further loss of context, leaving designated properties isolated as islands in the midst of abandoned buildings and vacant lots. Retention of neighborhood fabric supports significant individual properties in an interactive relationship that builds neighborhood confidence and pride, which are goals of ISP.

A significant factor involving neighborhood fabric is the abandonment of properties. Abandoned properties create severe community liabilities beyond simply jeopardizing historic properties. According to Alan Mallach’s 2006 study, Bringing Buildings Back: From Abandoned Properties to Community Assets: “diminishing property values and discouraging investment, increasing crime, raising the risk of fire, and imposing burdensome costs on the municipalities....” For Mallach, the solutions involve the prevention of abandonment in the first place, following by the control of abandoned properties where the abandonment could not be prevented, and finally fostering the sustainable reuse of abandoned properties.¹¹

Any, or all, of Mallach’s strategies described in his book depend on the recognition of the situation within the individual neighborhoods. In that regard, Historic Saint Paul and the other partnering organizations have expressed an interest in receiving and recording relevant cultural-resource observations made by Mead & Hunt during the course of the reconnaissance survey. These are observations that transcend, or are outside of, the specific properties recommended in this report for further study and evaluation, and these observations may contribute to a more comprehensive understanding of the neighborhood fabric.

Such observations, large and small, may include specific structures and groups of structures that possess historic and/or aesthetic interest, but may also extend to notes on the visual character of neighborhood areas, character-defining features, and historic neighborhood fabric and setting. Where feasible, current observations may be compared and contrasted with observations from the 1983 Historic Sites Survey. Such comparisons, almost three decades apart, would begin to suggest changes and trends that are important considerations in assessing the trends or arcs of neighborhood development, thereby leading to remedies and allocations of resources where appropriate.

Mead & Hunt observations about neighborhood fabric, including comparisons with the 1983 Historic Sites Survey and additional properties of possible historical and architectural interest, are included in Table 9.

Table 9. Survey Observations about Neighborhood Fabric of the Payne-Phalen Survey Area

Location	Feature/observation
Mount Ida Street, between Rivoli and Desoto Streets; south side of Cook Avenue between Walsh and Weide Streets	1983-2011 comparison: The 1983 Survey identified Queen Anne-inspired pattern book houses in this area that are representative of distinctive style of architecture in the Payne-Phalen neighborhood. The 2011 field review identified the continued existence of these properties and further research into the use of this Queen Anne pattern is recommended (see discussion in Section 2.B.(4), p. 45).
Payne to Greenbrier Avenues, from Jenks to Wells Streets; 679 Sims Avenue, 693 York Avenue	1983-2011 comparison: The 1983 Survey identified this area as a potential historic district of intact workers' houses. The 2011 field review revealed a subsequent loss of individual structures and a loss of integrity in surviving houses. A subsection of the 1983 area is recommended as a study area, with two properties recommended for intensive-level survey and research (see discussion in Section 2.B.(5), p. 45).
Railroad Island	The triangular area near East 7 th Street, bounded by rail lines, has long been identified as an important historic neighborhood and was highlighted in public involvement sessions. The 2011 field review noted a loss of individual structures resulting in vacant lots and infill, and a lack of integrity in surviving houses. Railroad Island is recommended as a study area (see discussion in Section 2.B.(5), p. 46).
East of the former Hamm's Brewery, south of the railroad corridor between Bush Avenue and Minnehaha Avenue	Collection of residential properties constructed in the late nineteenth and early twentieth century as worker housing, presumably for brewery and railroad employees.
York to Sims Streets, between Payne Avenue and Greenbrier Street	One of the earliest areas of residential development in Payne-Phalen.
North side of Case Avenue between Edgerton and Payne Avenues; Westminster Street to Clark Street, from Case Avenue to York Avenue; Burr Street, from Case Avenue to York Avenue	Concentrations of late nineteenth and early twentieth century working and middle class houses.
458 Maryland Avenue	Early twentieth century concrete block commercial building that reflects a type of construction material gaining popularity at the time.
Bruce Vento Elementary School, 409 Case Avenue	Distinctive example of early 1970s education-related architecture that has been more recently modified to meet current educational needs of the neighborhood.
Site of former Jackson School between Fred Street to the north, Tedesco Street to the south and Burr Street to the west	Masonry wall constructed as part of a Works Progress Administration Project to encircle the site of the former Jackson School. A multi-family housing development now occupies the site.

3. Thomas-Dale Survey Area

A. Historic themes

(1) Historic contexts and development of the Thomas-Dale survey area

Properties documented in the reconnaissance survey were associated with the following historic themes: Architecture; Business and Industry; Civic; Culture, Fine and Applied Arts; Education; Religion and Social Organizations; Residential Development; and Transportation.

In addition to these broad themes, the local historic contexts provide specific trends and themes important within the survey area. Together, these contexts serve as the basis for identifying and evaluating documented properties to determine if they qualify as a Saint Paul Heritage Preservation Site and/or for listing in the National Register. Properties may qualify based on their ability to retain the important physical features that convey their association with a historic theme and context and how well the property represents these features in comparison to similar properties.

A discussion of the City's historic contexts and previous inventories is included in Section 1. The development of an additional context entitled Neighborhoods at the Edge of the Walking City was part of this historic resources survey project. The purpose of a reconnaissance survey is to characterize the resources in relation to established historic contexts and then make recommendations for further research and survey work.

(2) Illustrated discussion of property types in the Thomas-Dale survey area

This section illustrates the primary property types documented in the survey of the Thomas-Dale, also interchangeably called the Frogtown, neighborhood. A brief discussion of each topic is followed by representative examples of selected properties documented in the survey area. Photographs of these properties serve to illustrate the property types associated with the historic contexts and the history of the community. A complete tabular listing of documented properties is included in Table 22 on page 112. See Map 8 on page 106 for the location of the Thomas-Dale survey area within the City of Saint Paul and Map 9 on page 107 for a detail map of the Thomas-Dale survey area.

Residential

The residential theme relates to broad patterns of population growth and Saint Paul expansion. Associated property types typically include single- and multi-unit dwellings connected with development patterns extending from major transportation routes and the natural growth of a community.

One of the oldest neighborhoods in Saint Paul, Thomas-Dale was primarily a working-and middle-class residential neighborhood settled between 1860 and 1880. Settlement of Thomas-Dale was due in part to the expansion of downtown and the construction of the Saint Paul and Pacific Railroad, which provided employment opportunities for residents. The neighborhood was primarily settled by immigrants from

Section 3 Thomas-Dale Survey Area

Poland, the Scandinavian countries, Germany, and Ireland, who built modest wood frame and brick houses.¹²

Thomas-Dale developed from east to west, with most of the residential development west of Dale Street occurring in the 1890s. Large frame and brick houses in the Queen Anne, Eastlake, and Colonial Revival styles were interspersed between the more modest wood frame and brick houses. Inference mapping indicated the oldest collection of intact residential development in the Thomas-Dale survey area was located along Sherburne, Edmund, and Charles Avenues between Dale and Kent Streets. While many alterations to these one- to one-and-one-half-story houses have occurred, the neighborhood character and street layout have been retained and are recognizable as an early development in the Thomas-Dale neighborhood.

The Thomas-Dale neighborhood has a number of “alley houses” in which an additional single-family residential dwelling was constructed on the same lot as another dwelling. Alley houses were the first primary structure constructed by a family until they could afford to build a larger house on the lot.¹³ In most cases, the alley house fronts the main street and is set back from the road. However, some alley houses were found to front the alley. A number of alley houses are still found in Thomas-Dale. Eleven alley houses were identified in the survey, primarily concentrated between Mackubin Street and Victoria Street from Minnehaha Avenue to Sherburne Avenue. Review of Sanborn maps show the area appeared to have many more alley houses that were removed or converted into a garage for the primary dwelling.

Multi-family housing, including double houses and larger row houses, is scattered throughout the survey area. Saint Paul's only concrete-block row house is located at 400 Van Buren Avenue.¹⁴ Designed by John Fischer in 1910, the row house has a Colonial Revival influence and retains much of its original materials and design.

The Fischer row house, constructed in 1910, is the only concrete-block row house in Saint Paul. View facing southeast.

By the early twentieth century, most of the Thomas-Dale area was fully developed with homes in modest Period Revival styles. A large concentration of homes built between 1911 and 1930 can be found between Victoria and Grotto Streets. Mid-twentieth century and more recent development has primarily occurred in the northwest corner of the survey area. The redevelopment of this area was spurred by the demolition of the 1881 Home of the Good Shepard, located at 919 Lafond Avenue, and clearing of this large tract of land in 1969. Ranch-style, Minimal Traditional, Split-Level, and Bi-Level houses are intermixed with early twentieth century bungalows and front gable vernacular homes. Mid-century multi-family apartments and duplexes were also constructed on vacant or redeveloped lots in this area. Minimal new infill construction has taken place in the Thomas-Dale survey area.

Commercial and Industrial

The commercial and industrial theme encompasses the story of the production and trade of goods and services extending from the earliest settlement period to recent times. In order to better understand commercial and industrial development within the survey area, the previously developed Neighborhood Commercial Centers: 1874-1960 was consulted.

¹⁴ Larry Millett, AIA Guide to the Twin Cities (Saint Paul: Minnesota Historical Society Press, 2007), 496.

The commercial corridors in the Thomas-Dale survey area date to the streetcar era, with retail corridors and nodes located along streetcar routes and at transfer points. Established in 1890, the busiest and first interurban streetcar line was the University line, which ran along University Avenue from downtown Saint Paul to downtown Minneapolis. University Avenue is a multi-block commercial corridor that continues to be an important commercial district for the Thomas-Dale neighborhood.¹⁵

Other east-west streetcar lines in the Thomas-Dale survey area included the Thomas Avenue line and the Rondo line. The Rondo line ran along the southern edge of the survey area, through the Rondo neighborhood. Established in 1891 and extended to Lexington Parkway by 1912, the Rondo line was not very popular because it did not directly connect to major transportation arterials in Saint Paul.¹⁶ Any commercial properties along the line were lost with the construction of Interstate 94 in the early 1960s.

The Hamline Avenue line began service in 1891 along University Avenue before being rerouted in 1906 to serve the residential neighborhoods along Thomas and Minnehaha Avenues. In the survey area, the line ran along Thomas Avenue between Rice Street and Lexington Avenue, where it continued west to Hamline Avenue.¹⁷ As a result of the reorientation, commercial businesses developed along Thomas Avenue at north-south intersections. Today, many of these commercial businesses have been converted into residential dwellings. The commercial development at Western Avenue North is the most intact of the Thomas Avenue commercial businesses. Dietsch's Hall, at the northwest corner of the intersection, is one example of the early twentieth century commercial building.

¹⁵ University Avenue was excluded from the survey area due to previous historic resources surveys. For more information on the historic resources located along University Avenue, see: Hess, Roise, and Company, "Supplemental Historic Properties Investigations and Evaluations for the Central Corridor Light Rail Transit Project" (2008); 106 Group, "Phase I Architectural History Investigation for the Proposed Central Transit Corridor, Hennepin and Ramsey Counties, Minnesota" (2003).

Dietsch's Hall, located at 601 Western Avenue, was a popular dancing hall, restaurant, and bar in the Thomas-Dale survey area. View facing northwest.

Commercial businesses not only developed at intersections but mid-block as well, as seen at 576 Charles Avenue. Behind the two-story commercial building is a one-story concrete block building that was home to a bakery. Although the commercial building was converted to a private residence, local sources indicate the original wheat grinding and baking equipment are still inside the building to the rear.

Section 3 Thomas-Dale Survey Area

The only north-south streetcar line through the survey area was the Dale line, established along Dale Street in 1914. The streetcar ran from downtown Saint Paul on Grand Avenue to Dale Street, where it turned north and extended to Maryland Avenue.¹⁸ A commercial corridor, with commercial nodes at University and Thomas Avenues, developed along the Dale line. In recent years, the Dale Street commercial corridor has been largely altered due to changes to historic storefronts and recently constructed infill development, and includes many vacant commercial properties.

The R.C. Berger Building, located at 535 Dale Street, is an intact example of early twentieth century commercial development along Dale Street. View facing west.

Industrial development within the Thomas-Dale neighborhood was largely due to the presence of two railroads. Railroad repair yards and shops were developed at the northern edge of the survey area for both the Great Northern and the Saint Paul and Pacific Railroads. Other industrial businesses, such as the United States Bedding Company, printing companies, and even a refrigerator factory developed near the railroad shops at Minnehaha Avenue and Dale Street.¹⁹ The Jackson Street shops, located northeast of the survey area, remain as a National Register and Saint Paul Heritage Preservation Site. The shops at Dale and Minnehaha were razed in 1999 and redeveloped as the Great Northern Business Center.²⁰

Civic

Civic properties reflect the activities of government to develop public recreational facilities and public buildings or social institutions. Public recreational facilities include parks and their associated structures developed for the purposes of providing amusement, sport, or diversion from work or domestic activities. Public buildings or social institutions include libraries, police stations, post offices, cemeteries, jails, armories, bridges, and city utility buildings.

A few civic properties are located in the Thomas-Dale neighborhood, including parks, such as Ryan and Scheffer Parks. However, these parks have been updated with modern equipment and enlarged recreation buildings. Other properties relating to the civic theme were located along the University Avenue corridor and not included in the survey area boundaries.

Education

Education-related property types include public and private educational institutions, such as the public school system, universities, trade schools, and colleges. The Thomas-Dale survey area supported four schools. Of these, two were historically associated with a parish and are located on the same block as the parish but have since become public educational centers. Two schools, one associated with the National Register-listed St. Agnes Church and one with St. Peter Claver Church, remain as private educational institutions in the survey area. The school associated with St. Peter Claver Church is modest in detail and features common mid-twentieth century details, including horizontal lines and narrow vertical windows.

Over the years the public educational facilities in the Thomas-Dale survey area have experienced a number of substantial additions and alterations and were not documented as part of the survey.

Religious and Social Organizations

The theme of religion relates to the institutionalized belief in, and practice of, faith. Associated property types identified during the survey include churches, parish office buildings, and clergy residences. The churches identified in the survey were associated with the different ethnic groups that settled in the Thomas-Dale survey area. Most churches identified were typically of brick or wood frame construction in the Gothic Revival styles.

The Thomas-Dale neighborhood has a number of churches historically related to ethnic groups. Due to the rich ethnic history of Thomas-Dale, each religious and ethnic group created its own congregation and constructed its own church. Early area churches included the Norwegian Evangelical Lutheran Church (1870), St. Vincent's Church (1889), University Avenue Congregational Church (1909), St. Agnes Catholic Church (1909), Polish Catholic St. Adalbert's (1909), Faith Lutheran Church (1914), and St. Matthew's Lutheran Church. Most of these churches are extant, and feature associated private schools. In general, the churches have undergone few changes over the last 100 years, though some feature modern vestibules or additions. Of the many churches in Thomas-Dale, only St. Agnes Catholic Church, a Middle European baroque inspired church, is listed in the National Register.

The Norwegian Evangelical Lutheran Church (1870) at 515 Farrington Street stands as an intact example of early ecclesiastical architecture in the survey area. View facing southwest.

A number of modest, wood frame and brick, mid-twentieth century churches are also located in the survey neighborhood. The largest of these is the St. James AME Church at 624 Central Avenue West, constructed in 1948. Located in what was the Rondo neighborhood, the church features modest detailing and large stained-glass windows. Further to the west, located at 375 Oxford Street North, is the St. Peter Claver Catholic Church and associated school. The church features modest mid-twentieth century detailing and exemplifies this era of ecclesiastical architecture.

Most churches sponsored social organizations for parishioners and the railroad companies also had leagues and organizations for workers. However, no buildings directly associated with social organizations were identified in the survey as these groups met at their church or in buildings associated with other uses.

St. Peter Claver Catholic Church located at 375 Oxford Street North is an example of modest mid-century ecclesiastical architecture in the southwestern corner of the survey area. View facing northwest.

Transportation

The transportation theme includes a variety of modes of transportation and their effects on the development and expansion of the surveyed neighborhoods. Streetcar lines, railroads, and associated buildings such as railroad depots, repair shops, and bridges are common property types associated with Transportation.

The location of the Great Northern; Saint Paul and Pacific; and the Chicago, Saint Paul, Minneapolis and Omaha Railroad lines in the Thomas-Dale neighborhood had a direct impact on the development of the neighborhood. Most of the railroad-related properties in the Thomas-Dale neighborhood are located just north of the survey area boundaries. The Jackson Street Railroad shops, located at the northeast edge of the Thomas-Dale neighborhood and featuring a number of railroad-related buildings and structures, are extant. However, the Great Northern rail yard (also the location of the Dale Street shops) at Dale Street and Minnehaha Avenue was razed. This area was redeveloped with light-industrial office and warehouse space. The complex is called the Great Northern Business Center, a nod to its former use.

The streetcar line, constructed through the neighborhood between 1890 and 1914, also encouraged commercial and residential development. The commercial corridors and businesses found along historic streetcar lines are the best reminder of this transportation system throughout Saint Paul. No transportation resources related to the streetcar lines within the survey areas are extant. However, the commercial nodes are a reminder that electric trolleys once passed through the neighborhood.

Many of the streets in the survey area were historically brick. However, over the years the brick streets were removed or covered with more modern paving materials, including concrete and asphalt. An exposed section of historic brick streets was found in the southwest portion of the survey area. The exposed brick streets help create a sense of time and place in these neighborhoods where the general integrity of homes has been diminished.

B. Reconnaissance survey results and recommendations for the Thomas-Dale survey area

The survey documented 62 individual properties, including 45 recommended as historic resources, according to the survey methodology. See Section 1 for a discussion of the survey methodology and the criteria for local designation and National Register eligibility. An inventory of the documented properties is provided in Table 22 on Page 112. This list is organized by address and indicates the property's historic name (generally determined by the original owner listed on the city building permit), SHPO inventory number, and recommendation if the property requires further survey and research. Inventory forms for properties are available at the City and the SHPO. In addition to the information included in Appendix A, inventory forms include a description of the property and the primary historic context.

(1) Overview of previous survey efforts in Thomas-Dale

Two properties in the survey area have already been recognized for their architectural and historical significance and are designated by the City as a Heritage Preservation Site and/or listed in the National Register. Table 13 provides a summary of these properties, while Map 10 on page 108 shows their locations.

(2) Thomas-Dale recommendations

Properties included in the inventory were documented and classified according to themes identified in this report. Table 14 provides a summary of these results.

(3) Individual historic resources, potential historic districts

The inventory includes 46 individual properties that are recommended as good candidates for intensive research and survey to determine if they qualify for designation by the City as Heritage Preservation Sites or for listing in the National Register. Intensive-level surveys follow and build upon the efforts of this reconnaissance-level survey by conducting thorough research to complete a detailed historic context and property-type analysis. The results of intensive-level surveys are subsequently used to further evaluate properties for Heritage Preservation Site and/or National Register eligibility.

Upon completion of the field survey, documented properties were assessed based on their related historical context, historic integrity, and comparison to similar properties within the survey area. Individual properties, summarized in Table 15, and groups of related properties that appear to display outstanding architectural merit or have a known historical association with an important event or significant person are recommended for intensive-level survey and research. See Map 10 on page 108 for the location of individual historic resources and potential historic districts recommended for further survey and research.

(a) Individual historic resources

Individual historic resources are listed according to their primary historic context and organized by address. Each listing also includes the historic name (if known), SHPO inventory number, date of construction, original owner (if known), and image of the property. Additional architectural details and historical information are included on the Saint Paul Historic Properties Inventory Form for each property, available at the partnering organizations' offices.

(b) Potential historic districts

In the 1983 Survey of Saint Paul and Ramsey County, Granger and Murphy identified the Frogtown Historic District, located within the current survey area. The potential historic district boundaries were proposed from Dale to Rice Streets between Minnehaha and University Avenues as the most intact area of working class neighborhoods. This concentration of houses was also identified in the inference mapping phase of the current survey. This entire area was field reviewed but not recommended for continued potential historic district status due to a substantial loss of integrity of the historic resources, including siding replacements, window replacements, additions, and vacant lots. However, a smaller area, as described below, is recommended for further survey and research as a potential residential historic district representing the Thomas-Dale neighborhood's earliest period of development as a working class neighborhood.

Frogtown Potential Residential Historic District

Saint Paul Designation Criteria: Criterion 1: History, Criterion 4: Architecture

National Register Criteria: Criterion A: History, Criterion C: Architecture

Bound by Kent Street to the east, Sherburne Avenue to the south, Dale Street to the west, and Edmund Avenue to the north, this area was identified as the oldest collection of residential and commercial properties primarily dating from the 1870s to 1890s in the Frogtown section of the Thomas-Dale neighborhood. See Map 11 on page 111 for the proposed boundaries. Houses are typically one-and-one-half-story front gable, wood frame houses with a number of brick houses interspersed throughout. Alley houses, which are typically small, single-family dwellings that were the first generation dwelling on a parcel, are also found in this area of the neighborhood. Larger, multi-family buildings are located along Sherburne Avenue. Commercial buildings are interspersed among the residential properties, particularly on Kent Street, and are typically located on street corners. Although many of the commercial buildings have been converted to residential use, they are generally still recognizable as such. Integrity of the properties is generally good to fair, with siding and window replacements and enclosed porches common to many of the properties. This collection is recommended for intensive-level research and survey to evaluate its significance and historic integrity, as well as to delineate the exact boundaries for the potential historic district.

(4) Thematic studies

Several types of resources were identified in the Thomas-Dale survey area, as well as in other survey areas, that are recommended for further research based on related themes. These themes may encompass a broader portion of Saint Paul outside of the survey area boundaries if research indicates. The types of resources are as follows:

- Brick single- and multi-family dwellings – Single- and multi-family dwellings constructed of brick are relatively uncommon throughout the Thomas-Dale survey area, as well as the other two survey areas. Additional research into the use of brick for residential construction, the source(s) of the brick, and use by particular builders may reveal significant historic associations. In an email message to the Steering Committee’s project manager on June 20, 2011, local historian Bob Roscoe identified the following brick dwellings in the Thomas-Dale survey area:

574 Blair	578 Blair	567 Charles
568 Charles	518 Charles	427 Charles
474 Charles	473 Charles	344-46 Edmund
493 Edmund	567 Edmund	579 Edmund
578 Edmund	595 Edmund	597 Edmund
603 Edmund	681 Farrington	705 Farrington
649 Kent	474 Sherburne	489 Sherburne
543 Sherburne	538 Sherburne	566 Sherburne
571 Sherburne	594 Thomas	590 Thomas
574 Thomas	526 Thomas	569 Van Buren
548 Van Buren	688 Virginia	684 Virginia
686 -694 Virginia	695 Virginia	624 Western

- Concrete block single- and multi-family dwellings – Single- and multi-family dwellings constructed of concrete block are uncommon throughout the Thomas-Dale survey area, as well as the other two survey areas. Additional research into the use of concrete block for residential construction, the source(s) of the concrete block, and use by particular builders may reveal significant historic associations. In an email message to the Steering Committee’s project manager on June 20, 2011, local historian Bob Roscoe identified the following concrete block dwellings in the Thomas-Dale survey area:

400-06 Van Buren

- Queen Anne pattern book houses – In the Thomas-Dale survey area, as well as in the Payne-Phalen survey area, a number of Queen Anne pattern book houses were identified as distinctive examples of an architectural style. The two-story houses are characterized by Queen Anne detailing and unique two-story, corner, square bay windows. Further research about the use of this pattern in residential construction is recommended.

- Alley houses – As described in Section 3.A.(2), the Thomas-Dale neighborhood has a number of “alley houses” in which an additional single-family residential dwelling was constructed on the same lot as another dwelling. A number of alley houses are still found in Thomas-Dale. Eleven alley houses were identified in the survey, primarily concentrated between Mackubin Street and Victoria Street from Minnehaha Avenue to Sherburne Avenue. Review of Sanborn maps show the area appeared to have many more alley houses that were removed or converted into a garage for the primary dwelling. Further research is recommended to determine if there are significant historic associations with the early settlement patterns of the Thomas-Dale neighborhood.

(5) Study areas

In addition to the individual properties recommended for intensive-level research and survey and the future survey and research topics, several concentrations of properties within the survey area were identified as study areas. These properties were identified through inference mapping as potential historic districts based on similar characteristics. During field review the resources within the study areas did not rise to the level of architectural significance, individually or collectively, and/or did not retain sufficient integrity to be recommended as potential historic districts. However, if additional research reveals significant historical associations for a study area, intensive-level research and survey may be warranted. The study areas are as follows:

- Residential development in Thomas-Dale: Bound by Charles Avenue to the north, Sherburne Avenue to the south, Rice Street to the east, and Marion Street to the west, this one-block area contains late nineteenth and early twentieth century dwellings that are typically two-story, front gable houses with open or enclosed porches. Multi-family dwellings are interspersed among the single-family dwellings along Sherburne Street. Commercial buildings are located at the east end of the block, facing Rice Street. Building setbacks and lot sizes are varied. According to the 1903 Sanborn maps, this block was historically associated with a larger area of residential development to the north. However, a large multi-family complex constructed in the mid-twentieth century replaced the earlier development. More recent commercial development abuts this block to the south. Generally, the residences on this block have experienced alterations, including siding replacement, porch infills, and window replacements. Overall, the condition of the houses is fair to poor, although a couple of houses mid-block along Charles Street have been rehabilitated to reflect their historic appearances. Collectively, these resources do not rise to the level of architectural significance to be recommended as a potential historic district. However further research may reveal important historic associations for which the block may be significant.
- Commercial buildings interspersed throughout the neighborhood: Commercial buildings were historically located throughout the Thomas-Dale neighborhood rather than being concentrated only in commercial nodes or along major transportation corridors. In some instances, the commercial buildings were located mid-block between residential properties. The buildings housed numerous types of businesses, including markets, bars, bakeries, and cigar factories. While many mid-block commercial buildings exist in the survey area, few rise to the level of architectural significance to be recommended individually for further research due to alterations and changes in use. However, further research may reveal important historic associations for which the buildings may be significant.

C. Observations about Neighborhood Fabric of the Thomas-Dale Survey Area

Although the primary goal of a historic resources inventory is to survey and evaluate properties in terms of local and National Register designation criteria, partnering organizations have individual missions that incorporate other areas of heritage preservation, including broader neighborhood development and revitalization. Historic Saint Paul's mission, for example, transcends specific buildings to include "working to preserve, protect, and enhance the historic character of Saint Paul's neighborhoods."

In particular, Historic Saint Paul participates in ISP, the Mayor's neighborhood reinvestment initiative that is "committed to promoting, supporting and helping people grow viable and sustainable communities."²¹ For Historic Saint Paul, involvement in ISP means working toward preservation beyond individual properties and historic districts and understanding longer-term growth and decline. This approach suggests a general understanding of "neighborhood fabric" in addition to specific designations of significant properties.

Neighborhood fabric includes groups and collections of historic-age properties that may not rise to the level of significance that leads to designation, but which remain important as contexts for significant properties and as building blocks for neighborhood revitalization. Loss of neighborhood fabric can lead to a downward spiral of further loss of context, leaving designated properties isolated as islands in the midst of abandoned buildings and vacant lots. Retention of neighborhood fabric supports significant individual properties in an interactive relationship that builds neighborhood confidence and pride, which are goals of ISP.

A significant factor involving neighborhood fabric is the abandonment of properties. Abandoned properties create severe community liabilities beyond simply jeopardizing historic properties. According to Alan Mallach's 2006 study, Bringing Buildings Back: From Abandoned Properties to Community Assets: "diminishing property values and discouraging investment, increasing crime, raising the risk of fire, and imposing burdensome costs on the municipalities...." For Mallach, the solutions involve the prevention of abandonment in the first place, following by the control of abandoned properties where the abandonment could not be prevented, and finally fostering the sustainable reuse of abandoned properties.²²

Any, or all, of Mallach's strategies described in his book depend on the recognition of the situation within the individual neighborhoods. In that regard, Historic Saint Paul and the other partnering organizations have expressed an interest in receiving and recording relevant cultural-resource observations made by Mead & Hunt during the course of the reconnaissance survey. These are observations that transcend, or are outside of, the specific properties recommended in this report for further study and evaluation, and these observations may contribute to a more comprehensive understanding of the neighborhood fabric.

²¹ "Invest Saint Paul Initiative (Overview)."

²² Mallach, x-xi.

Such observations, large and small, may include specific structures and groups of structures that possess historic and/or aesthetic interest, but may also extend to notes on the visual character of neighborhood areas, character-defining features, and historic neighborhood fabric and setting. Where feasible, current observations may be compared and contrasted with observations from the 1983 Historic Sites Survey. Such comparisons, almost three decades apart, would begin to suggest changes and trends that are important considerations in assessing the trends or arcs of neighborhood development, thereby leading to remedies and allocations of resources where appropriate.

Mead & Hunt observations about neighborhood fabric, including comparisons with the 1983 Historic Sites Survey and additional properties of possible historical and architectural interest, are included in Table 20.

Table 20. Survey Observations about Neighborhood Fabric of the Thomas-Dale Survey Area

Location	Feature/observation
Dale to Rice streets, between Minnehaha and University avenues	1983-2011 comparison: The 1983 Survey identified this area as a potential historic district, being an intact working class neighborhood. The 2011 field review revealed substantial loss of integrity. A subsection of the area is recommended for additional survey and research as a potential historic district (see discussion in Section 3.B.(3)(b), pp. 95).
Victoria and Mackubin Streets, between Minnehaha and Sherburne Avenues	Alley houses reflect the historic development patterns of the neighborhood.
576 Charles Avenue, to rear at alley	Concrete block garage and bakery building are representative of the historic commercial buildings interspersed throughout the survey area.
Edmund Avenue, between Dale and Kent Streets	Collection of brick houses similar in style, design, and age are representative of an uncommon construction material.
Thomas and Edmund Avenues, between Victoria and Avon Streets	Collection of large houses in Victorian styles.
Sherburne to Edmund Avenues, between Dale and Kent Streets	Residential development dating primarily to the period of 1870 to 1890 representing one of the earliest areas of residential development.
271 Sherburne Avenue and two houses to west (north side of Sherburne Avenue between Galtier Street and Farrington Street)	Larger, generally intact examples of late nineteenth century houses.
Central Avenue West at Grotto Street North	Evoking a sense of historic time and place for the neighborhood, there is a section of brick street visible where asphalt pavement has eroded away.

4. West 7th Street Survey Area

A. Historic themes

(1) Historic contexts and development of the West 7th Street survey area

As with the previous survey areas, properties documented in the reconnaissance survey were associated with the following historic themes: Architecture; Business and Industry; Civic; Culture, Fine and Applied Arts; Education; Religion and Social Organizations; Residential Development; and Transportation.

In addition to these broad themes, the local contexts developed provide specific trends and themes important within the survey area. Together, these contexts serve as the basis for identifying and evaluating documented properties to determine if they qualify as Saint Paul Heritage Preservation Site and/or for listing in the National Register. Properties may qualify based on their ability to retain the important physical features that convey their association with a historic theme and context and how well the property represents these features in comparison to similar properties.

A discussion of the City's historic contexts and previous inventories is included in Section 1. The development of an additional context entitled Neighborhoods at the Edge of the Walking City was part this historic resources survey project. In carrying out a reconnaissance survey, the purpose is to characterize the resources in the survey area in relation to established historic contexts and then make recommendations for further research and survey work.

(2) Illustrated discussion of property types of the West 7th Street survey area

This section illustrates the primary property types documented in the survey of the West 7th Street neighborhood. A brief discussion of each topic is followed by representative examples of properties documented in the survey area. Photographs of these properties serve to illustrate the property types associated with the historic contexts and the history of the community. See Table 33 on page 170 for a complete tabular listing of documented properties. See Map 12 on page 164 for the location of the West 7th Street survey area within the City of Saint Paul and Map 13 on page 165 for a detail map of the West 7th Street survey area.

Residential

The residential theme relates to broad patterns of population growth and Saint Paul expansion. Associated property types typically include single- and multi-unit dwellings connected with the city's growth.

The West 7th Street neighborhood evolved from the Upper Landing, a business district with a steamboat dock near present-day Chestnut Street (outside of the survey area). Upper Landing rivaled Lower Landing, which later became downtown Saint Paul, as the commercial center of Saint Paul. Eventually, commercial development centered on Lower Landing while Upper Landing developed into one of Saint Paul's first residential areas.²³

In the 1820s former fur traders and discharged Fort Snelling soldiers were the earliest inhabitants to construct temporary log cabins on the western banks of the Mississippi River below the neighborhood. Immigrant groups later settled in the West 7th Street neighborhood between the 1850s and 1890s, and built the first permanent homes. The immigrant groups, consisting primarily of Germans, Irish, Polish, Czech, and Italians, were attracted to the area's large industries, including breweries, foundries, factories, and railroad shops.²⁴

The earliest immigrant homes were wood frame, brick, or limestone dwellings influenced by the popular Federal and Greek Revival architectural styles. Many of the homes display modest detailing and simple forms. From the 1870s through the 1890s, larger frame or brick houses were constructed in the popular styles of the time, including Italianate, Queen Anne, and Colonial Revival.

An early stone pioneer house located at 445 Smith Avenue. View facing southwest.

Due to its proximity to many industries as well as downtown, the West 7th Street neighborhood was completely developed by the turn of the century and features few early twentieth century residences. Mid-twentieth century development is most common north of West 7th Street, where Minimal Traditional and Ranch-style homes have replaced earlier homes or filled vacant or subdivided lots.

Section 4
West 7th Street Survey Area

Multi-family housing is also located in the West 7th Street survey area. Late nineteenth century brick and wood frame row houses with open porches and tall windows add to the neighborhood's sense of place. The Lauer Flats, located at 295 Dousman, and the Burbank Row house at 277 Goodrich Avenue, are designated Saint Paul Heritage Preservation Sites. A late twentieth century apartment high rise building located north of West 7th Street at Ann Street is the newest multi-family residential complex in the survey area.

The Gardner Row House at 89 Leech is an example of a row house found in the West 7th Street survey area. View facing southwest.

There is a long-standing tradition of moving residential buildings into the West 7th Street survey area. The neighborhood has a number of buildings that were moved from other sites, usually because of commercial development or road improvement projects. Because moving buildings into the area began as early as the 1860s, the fact that buildings are not on their original site does not have a negative impact on any potential districts or the character of the neighborhood. In general, the relocated properties are of a compatible age, style, and form as original buildings. Additionally, because many of the buildings were relocated as the first wave of residential development occurred in the area, these homes became part of the early development pattern of the area.

This Queen Anne inspired residence was moved to this location in the 1970s due to a commercial development project. View facing northwest.

Commercial and Industrial

The commercial and industrial theme encompasses the story of the production and trade of goods and services extending from the earliest settlement period to recent times. In order to better understand commercial and industrial development within the survey area, the previously developed context Neighborhood Commercial Centers: 1874-1960 was consulted.

Within West 7th Street neighborhood, commercial development occurred primarily along West 7th Street. This major commercial corridor was the earliest connection between downtown Saint Paul and Fort Snelling. Commercial development in the survey area exploded in the 1870s when the horsecar line, and later electric streetcar line in the 1890s was established on West 7th Street. As a result, brick commercial buildings offering goods and services, such as grocers, meat markets, hardware dealers, and other domestic services, were constructed along the horsecar/streetcar line. A small pocket of early twentieth century commercial buildings at Douglas Street and West 7th Street remain as a reminder of commercial development along the historic transit line. Of these buildings, the 1891 Otto Rohland building at 455 West 7th Street is the largest.

The 1891 Otto Rohland building is located along West 7th Street and is the largest late nineteenth century commercial building in the survey area. View facing north.

However, the commercial corridor along West 7th Street in the survey area has experienced many changes over the years. A number of original commercial buildings have been removed from the street and replaced. Historically, residential properties have been converted to office or commercial spaces, many of which have had alterations to serve the buildings' new functions. Mancini's Restaurant at 531 West 7th Street is an example of mid-twentieth century development along the corridor. Modern gas stations and drive-thru restaurants are found at the far southwestern portion of the survey area. Additionally, two funeral homes are located along West 7th Street in the survey area. The Kessler & Maguire Funeral Home at 640 West 7th Street was constructed in the 1926. The Tudor Revival inspired building has only had minor modifications. The Wulffgodbout Funeral Home at 560 West 7th Street was constructed in 1940. It features modest Gothic Revival influences.

Kessler & Maguire Funeral Home at 640 West 7th Street is one of two funeral homes along West 7th Street in the survey area. View facing south.

Industrial development in the West 7th Street neighborhood is largely located outside of the survey area. Due to the proximity to the Upper Landing, a number of industries developed along the Mississippi River to the south of the survey area. These industries included six breweries and a number of factories. The presence of industrial and commercial businesses within the neighborhood encouraged residential and commercial growth.

Civic

Civic properties reflect the activities of government to develop public recreational facilities and public buildings or social institutions. Public recreational facilities include parks and their associated structures, and were developed for the purposes of providing amusement, sport, or diversion from work or domestic activities. Public buildings or social institutions include libraries, police stations, post office, cemeteries, jails, armories, bridges, and city utility buildings.

No civic properties were identified in the West 7th Street survey area.

Education

Education-related property types include public and private educational institutions, such as the public school system, universities, trade schools, and colleges. Two schools, one private and one public, were identified in the West 7th Street survey area. The Open School at 90 Western Avenue is a modestly ornamented building with carved door surrounds. A 1936 WPA-funded stone wall lines the boundary of the school. The Montessori School at 175 Western Avenue was originally associated with the St. Stanislaus Catholic Church at 398 Superior Street, but has since been converted into a private charter school.

Open School, located at 90 Western Avenue, is the only public school in the West 7th Street survey area. View facing east.

Religious and Social Organizations

The theme of religion relates to the institutionalized belief in, and practice of, faith. Associated property types identified during the survey include churches, parish office buildings, and clergy residences. The churches identified in the survey were associated with the different ethnic groups that settled the area.

Because the West 7th Street neighborhood was settled by a mix of ethnic groups, including Germans, Irish, Poles, Czechs, and Italians, a number of churches were constructed to meet each group's religious needs. Three churches are extant within the survey area. The earliest of these is the 1903 Central Church of Christ located at 80 Leech Street. Another early congregation was the Polish and Bohemian congregation of St. Stanislaus Catholic Church. The congregation's first church at Goodhue Street and Western Avenue was constructed in 1872. The church was reconstructed at the same location in 1940 in the Gothic Revival style. The most recently constructed church in the survey area is St. Mark's Lutheran Church at 550 West 7th Street. The stone veneer church, constructed in 1955, features a low profile and horizontal lines popular in ecclesiastical architecture of the time.

Central Church of Christ at 80 Leech Street, constructed in 1903, is the earliest extant church in the survey area. View facing northeast.

The social organization, Czecho-Slovak Protection Society (CSPS), constructed its headquarters at 381 South Michigan Street. CSPS Hall served as a recreational center and meeting house for Czech and Slovak immigrants in Saint Paul. This large brick building is listed in the National Register and is a Saint Paul Heritage Preservation Site.

Transportation

The transportation theme includes a variety of modes of transportation and their effects on the development and expansion of the surveyed neighborhoods. Streetcar lines, railroads, and associated buildings such as railroad depots, repair shops, and bridges are common property types associated with the theme of transportation.

The first form of transportation in the area was by boat along the Mississippi River. Upper Landing, developed north of the survey area, was an important boat docking station and commercial and residential area in the early years of Saint Paul development. The railroad also played an important part in the development of the survey area, influencing the development of industries and businesses along the rail line which provided employment opportunities for area residents. However, most of the resources associated with the earliest transportation history for the West 7th Street survey area are located outside of the survey area boundaries.

The railroad grades and extensive system of retaining walls, located along the bluff paralleling Cliff Road, are an important collection of features along the southern survey area boundary that illustrates the railroad history of the area. In the late nineteenth and early twentieth century, the Chicago, Milwaukee, Saint Paul and Pacific Railroad (Milwaukee Road) constructed an inclined grade to bring the rail line from the Mississippi River flood plain up to the first bluff level. This grade is considered to be one of the steepest rail grades in the region. The construction of the grade along the bluff necessitated the construction of extensive stone retaining walls that continue to protect the bluff from erosion and collapse and protect the homes on the bluff edge. The rail line continues to be used on a daily basis, by Amtrak between the Twin Cities and Chicago.

North side of Shepard Road between Chesnutt Street and Randolph Avenue.

The West 7th Street survey area developed prior to the advent of major public transportation sources in the city. However, the commercial corridor found in the neighborhood benefited from the horsecar, and later streetcar line, that extended to Fort Snelling on West 7th Street. The associated streetcar rail lines have long been removed from the transportation corridor; however, extant commercial businesses are a testament to the impact the streetcar line had on commercial development in the survey area.

B. Reconnaissance survey results and recommendations for the West 7th Street survey area

The survey documented 80 individual properties, including 72 recommended as historic resources, according to the survey methodology. See Section 1 for a discussion of the survey methodology and the criteria for local designation and National Register eligibility. An inventory of the documented properties is provided on page 170. This list is organized by address and indicates the property's historic name (generally determined by the original owner listed on the city building permit), SHPO inventory number, and recommendation if the property requires further survey and research work. Inventory forms for properties are available at the City and the SHPO. In addition to the information included in Table 33 on page 170, inventory forms include a description of the property and the primary historic context.

(1) Overview of previous survey efforts

Five properties in the survey area have already been recognized for their architectural and/or historical significance and are designated by the City as Heritage Preservation Sites and/or listed in the National Register. Table 24 provides a summary of these properties, while Map 14 on page 166 shows their locations.

(2) Recommendations

Properties included in the inventory were documented and classified according to themes identified in this report. Table 25 provides a summary of these results.

(3) Individual historic resources and potential historic districts

The inventory includes 72 individual properties and one potential historic district that are recommended as good candidates for intensive research and survey to determine if they qualify for designation by the City as a Heritage Preservation Site or for listing in the National Register. Intensive-level surveys follow and build upon the efforts of the reconnaissance-level survey by conducting thorough research to complete a detailed historic context and property-type analysis. The results of intensive-level surveys are subsequently used to further evaluate properties for local and/or National Register eligibility.

Upon completion of the field survey, documented properties were assessed based on their related historical context, historic integrity, and comparison to similar properties within the survey area. Individual properties, as summarized in Table 26, and groups of related properties that appear to display outstanding architectural merit or have known association with important historic events or significant people are recommended for intensive-level survey and research. See Map 14 on page 166 for the location of individual properties and potential historic districts recommended for further survey and research.

(a) Individual historic resources

Individual properties are listed according to their primary historic context and organized by address. Each listing also includes the historic name (if known), SHPO inventory number, date of construction, original owner (if known), and image of the property. Additional architectural details and historical information are included on the Saint Paul Historic Property Inventory Form for each property, available at the partnering organizations' offices.

(b) Potential historic districts

The inventory includes one concentration of properties that is recommended for further intensive research and survey to determine if it qualifies for designation by the City as a Heritage Preservation Site and/or listing in the National Register as a potential historic district. Mead & Hunt delineated preliminary boundaries to guide future intensive survey and research efforts (see Map 14 on page 166). Individual properties within the boundaries of these concentrations are identified in the inventory contributing or noncontributing resources to the potential historic district.

The potential historic district for which intensive-level research and survey is recommended is described below. The associated Saint Paul Heritage Preservation Site and National Register criteria for which the potential historic district may qualify for designation are also provided.

West 7th Street Potential Residential Historic District

Saint Paul Designation Criteria: Criterion 1: Development, Criterion 4: Architecture

National Register: Criterion A: Exploration/Settlement, Social History, Criterion C: Architecture

In the Survey of Saint Paul and Ramsey County five square blocks west of the Irvine Park Historic District were identified as a potential extension to that district.²⁵ This area included Smith, Leech, and Wilkin Streets between Forbes and Goodrich Avenues, and both sides of McBoal and Goodrich Avenues between West 7th and Wilkin Streets. Further research and study of the area was presented in the 1992 report entitled Uppertown Survey in which potential historic boundaries were proposed between Interstate 35E to the north, the railroad grade and bluff to the south, the Irvine Park Historic District to the east, and Toronto Street to the west.²⁶

Drawing upon the previous survey efforts and utilizing inference mapping prepared for the current historic resources inventory, Mead & Hunt historians identified a concentration of residential properties south of West 7th Street between Wilkin and Richmond Streets for review based on similar characteristics, such as dates of construction. During the reconnaissance survey additional unifying characteristics, including architectural styles and similar building sizes were identified. This information, coupled with a review of historic integrity, resulted in refined potential district boundaries that closely follow the boundaries recommended in 1983.

This potential residential district identified in the West 7th Street survey area includes houses constructed from the 1850s through the 1890s. Reflecting what was popular with the first wave of immigrants to this area, the houses constructed in the pre-Civil War period are primarily modest vernacular forms or more formal Federal and Greek Revival architectural styles. These pre-Civil War houses possibly represent the largest collection of the earliest houses constructed in the city. A large number of the houses were located along Banfil Street between Dousman and Smith Avenues. With the second wave of immigration in the 1870s and 1880s, houses in the potential Uppertown Residential Historic District are more stylized and exhibit Italianate or Queen Anne architectural influences.

In general, integrity of the potential historic district is fair with alterations including siding replacement, window replacement, enclosed porches, and small additions. However, the form, plan, and style that is representative of the area remains visible and apparent. The oldest properties identified in the district boundaries exhibit the largest number of alterations, but were included as contributing properties due to their significant age.

A number of the houses have been moved to this area due to transportation and development projects in other locations in the city. Houses are generally evenly spaced on narrow, deep lots. There are few newly constructed houses within the district, a result of larger lots being subdivided. Single- and multi-family buildings are interspersed throughout area. In addition to the residences within the potential historic district, one church, currently known as the Sharon Seventh-Day Adventist Church, is located in the area at the northeast corner of McBoal and Leech Streets.

The potential historic district boundaries were identified based on natural terrain, the general integrity of the area, and the age of the building stock. Due to the limits of this reconnaissance survey, the preliminary boundaries for the potential historic district were identified as Wilkin Street to the east; West 7th Street to the west (excluding corner commercial properties); Forbes Avenue between Wilkin and Leech Streets, Sturgis Avenue at West 7th Street to Leech Street (excluding commercial properties), and the south side of Goodrich Avenue between West 7th Street and Douglas Street to the north; the portion of Banfil Street between Dousman Street to Smith Avenue and including 273 Goodhue Avenue to the east; and Cliff Avenue between Smith Avenue and Wilkin Street to the south. See Map 15 on page 169 for the preliminary residential historic district boundaries.

(4) Thematic studies

Several types of resources were identified in the West 7th Street survey area that are recommended for further research based on related themes. These themes may encompass a broader portion of Saint Paul outside of the survey area boundaries if research indicates. The types of resources are as follows:

- Brick single- and multi-family dwellings – Single- and multi-family dwellings constructed of brick are relatively uncommon throughout the West 7th Street survey area, as well as the other two survey areas. Additional research into the use of brick for residential construction, the source(s) of the brick, and use by particular builders may reveal significant historic associations.
- Limestone single- and multi-family dwellings – Limestone dwellings are relatively uncommon throughout the West 7th Street survey area, and relate to the earliest phases of development of the neighborhood. Additional research into the use of limestone construction, the source(s) of limestone, and use by particular builders may reveal significant historical associations.

C. Observations about Neighborhood Fabric of the West 7th Street Survey Area

Although the primary goal of a historic resources inventory is to survey and evaluate properties in terms of local and National Register designation criteria, partnering organizations have individual missions that incorporate other areas of heritage preservation, including broader neighborhood development and revitalization. Historic Saint Paul’s mission, for example, transcends specific buildings to include “working to preserve, protect, and enhance the historic character of Saint Paul’s neighborhoods.”

In particular, Historic Saint Paul participates in ISP, the Mayor’s neighborhood reinvestment initiative that is “committed to promoting, supporting and helping people grow viable and sustainable communities.”²⁷ For Historic Saint Paul, involvement in ISP means working toward preservation beyond individual properties and historic districts and understanding longer-term growth and decline. This approach suggests a general understanding of “neighborhood fabric” in addition to specific designations of significant properties.

Neighborhood fabric includes groups and collections of historic-age properties that may not rise to the level of significance that leads to designation, but which remain important as contexts for significant properties and as building blocks for neighborhood revitalization. Loss of neighborhood fabric can lead to a downward spiral of further loss of context, leaving designated properties isolated as islands in the midst of abandoned buildings and vacant lots. Retention of neighborhood fabric supports significant individual properties in an interactive relationship that builds neighborhood confidence and pride, which are goals of ISP.

A significant factor involving neighborhood fabric is the abandonment of properties. Abandoned properties create severe community liabilities beyond simply jeopardizing historic properties. According to Alan Mallach’s 2006 study, Bringing Buildings Back: From Abandoned Properties to Community Assets: “diminishing property values and discouraging investment, increasing crime, raising the risk of fire, and imposing burdensome costs on the municipalities....” For Mallach, the solutions involve the prevention of abandonment in the first place, following by the control of abandoned properties where the abandonment could not be prevented, and finally fostering the sustainable reuse of abandoned properties.²⁸

²⁷ “Invest Saint Paul Initiative (Overview).”

²⁸ Mallach, x-xi.

Any, or all, of Mallach’s strategies described in his book depend on the recognition of the situation within the individual neighborhoods. In that regard, Historic Saint Paul and the other partnering organizations have expressed an interest in receiving and recording relevant cultural-resource observations made by Mead & Hunt during the course of the reconnaissance survey. These are observations that transcend, or are outside of, the specific properties recommended in this report for further study and evaluation, and these observations may contribute to a more comprehensive understanding of the neighborhood fabric.

Such observations, large and small, may include specific structures and groups of structures that possess historic and/or aesthetic interest, but may also extend to notes on the visual character of neighborhood areas, character-defining features, and historic neighborhood fabric and setting. Where feasible, current observations may be compared and contrasted with observations from the 1983 Historic Sites Survey. Such comparisons, almost three decades apart, would begin to suggest changes and trends that are important considerations in assessing the trends or arcs of neighborhood development, thereby leading to remedies and allocations of resources where appropriate.

Mead & Hunt observations about neighborhood fabric, including comparisons with the 1983 Historic Sites Survey and additional properties of possible historical and architectural interest are included in Table 31.

Table 31. Survey Observations about Neighborhood Fabric of the West 7th Street Survey Area

Location	Feature/observation
Extensive area west of Irvine Park Historic District	1983-2011 comparison: The 1983 Survey identified an area west of the Irvine Park Historic District as a potential district extension. A much larger area was studied in 1992. The 2011 field review examined the entire area for changes in integrity and a subsection similar to the 1983 boundaries is recommended as a potential residential historic district (see discussion in Section 4.B.(3)(b), pp. 153).
555-561 West 7 th Street	Three Queen Anne residences moved to this location to serve as offices.
229-237 Ann Street	Four houses exhibiting the same architectural style, design, and form constructed between 1906 and 1914 for the Gombold family.
449-478 West 7 th Street and 101 Douglas Street	Only collection of late nineteenth century commercial development in the survey area.
Banfil Street, between Smith Avenue North and Dousman Street	Collection of c.1850 to 1865 houses, as identified in the 1992 Uppertown survey, representing one of the largest collections of pre-Civil War houses in the city.
254 and 258 Banfil Street	Two houses moved to these locations in the 1960s from the Upper Levee Polish settlement, reflecting the common practice of moving houses to other locations in the city for continued use.
