

Significant Minnesota African Americans Resource List

Prepared by Frank M. White

The goal of this resource list is to provide a beginning look at African American individuals that have had a significant impact on local history in Minnesota.

Because African American history has been underrepresented and documented, there's been a lack of sharing this history in local school districts. It is important for the students at our schools and communities to have a better understanding and acknowledgement that African Americans have made positive contributions to the footprint of Minnesota, it's beginning, it's legacy and its history.

This is not intended to be a complete list but rather a beginning resource of individuals that have had an impact in everyday life, civil rights, government, education, and sports. There are truly more individuals that could be included in this list but at this time the intent is to provide a direction and inspiration for teachers and students to seek more about our African American history in the North Star state.

I encourage teachers and administrators to seek addition names from elders and other sources from the community to assist in sharing, inspiring and acknowledging contributions made by African Americans to Minnesota's history.

I would like to thank Yusef Mgeni for the following quote from Dr. Clarke.

"Dr. John Henrik Clarke stated that, "History is not only important in making a people whole again, but the role of history is also about how a people use their talent to create memories that give them respect and command the respect of other people. History develops a pride and awareness in people, so that they can become better instruments for living together with other people." This "sense of identity," Clarke would conclude, "is the stimulation for all of a people's honest and creative endeavors."
